Cong Hideout Located

SAIGON AP -- Operation Cedar Falls turned up a massive tunnel today within the Iron Triangle that may have served as the long- sought headquarters of the Viet Cong's 4th Military Region, from which Communists have launched attacks on Saigon outposts.

Men of the U. S. 196th Light Infantry Brigade probed the tunnel. Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, the brigade commander, said they found maps, plans, weapons, booby traps and some guerrillas within the vast boring, 25 miles northwest of Saigon. This was one phase of a drive engaging about 30,000 American and South Vietnamese troops.

In the air war, American bombers hammered at North Vietnamese rail yards and main lines Thursday for the fourth straight day. But U. S. military headquarters reported two of the planes and the four fliers who manned them did not return.

Many of the strikes were against the northeast line, along "MIG Valley" in the Red River Delta, but there was no report of any MIGs rising to challenge the American raiders.

Ground fighting in South Vietnam was confined to small, scattered engagements, but al-

Long to Publish Book Probing Wiretapping

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., will publish a book Feb. 20 about his investigation of wiretapping and "bugging" by government agencies and private industry.

The book, called "The Intruders," will be published by Fredericak A. Praeger Inc. of New York and will have a foreword by Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

"The Justice Department's use of wiretapping," Long charged in the book, "and its double standard of enforcement, running from lukewarm efforts against private wiretappers to none at all against law-enforcement wiretappers, has had a disastrous effect on privacy. . .

The guilty and innocent alike have shared the anonymous attentions of the snoopers."

Long recalls a Senate hearing before his subcommittee which "produced the dismaying example of a New York police officer who, by means of a single tap, overheard conversations involving the Julliard School of Music, Brooklyn Law School, Consolidated Radio Artists, Western Union, the Mercantile National Bank, the Medical Bureau to aid Spanish Democracy, brokers, engineers, a dry cleaner, numerous bars and - a little welcome irony here - a New York precinct stationhouse.

GOP Broadcast Gag Rule

JEFFERSON CITY, (AP) — Republican state and legislative leaders today joined in a denunciation of the House Democrats' apparent insistence on censoring any edited radio or television tape of House action.

They called it the "broadcasting gag rule" and urged members of the Democratic majority to join them in correcting the rule.

Rep. R. J. King of Clayton, minority floor leader, said he tried to bail the Democrats out with an amendment Jan. 11 but the majority members used a solid front for the strict rule.

A few of the most serious sponsors of the rule think edited tapes might make them look bad by taking portions of a floor debate "out of context."

Here are portions of the statements of the GOP leaders:

National Committeemen Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie — "Censorship has never been and is not now compatible with freedom. The voters will ultimately decide the rights and wrongs of this issue."

National Committeewoman Rosemary Ginn of Columbia — "If Missouri Democrats are trying to disassociate themselves from the policies of the Great Society, they are certainly doing a poor job of it."

State GOP Chairman Dorman Steelman of Salem -- "Why do the Democrats want to hide behind the gag rule? Does the governor directly or indirectly have anything to with this?"

Rep. Martin Degenhardt of Perryville, head of the GOP policy committee — "Actually this suggests a complete lack of willingness on the part of the Democratic leadership to adequately inform the public and therefore negates their avowal of being servants of the people."

King — "Rule 107B is censorship in the strictest sense of the word."

Rep. Robert E. Young of Carthage, assistant floor leader — "The Missouri House should again show the nation and the world that Missouri leads the way in expressing the spirit of representative government by renewing the former free and open broadcasting rule."

Caucus chairman Vernon Betz of Trenton — "This censorship rule which was adopted by the Missouri House of Representatives could, if carried through in principle, lead to the barring of all news media from any reporting of proceedings in any level of government."

Mississippi County Budget At $237,545

CHARLESTON -- The Mississippi County Court has approved a tentative budget for 1967 totaling $237,545.46 according to County Clerk Arthur Lee Goodin.

A public hearing on the proposed budget has been called for 1 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 26 at the courthouse. Final budget approval will not come until after the hearing, Goodin said.

The clerk said anticipated revenues for 1967 total $213,074.41. The difference between that figure and the approved budget total can be met by using part of the cash on hand Jan. 1, which totaled $131,962.18.

Actual expenditures for 1966 were $204,673.60, according to the county clerk.

The new budget is broken down as follows: salaries, fees and office expenses $124,072.46 circuit court administration $7,730; election costs $4,000; public welfare and health services $38,860; other contingent expenses and obligations $62,883.

60 Listen to Appeal for Expanded Library Serrvice

Sixty Southeast Missouri public library directors, librarians, city officials and library patrons heard a plea last night for expanded library service in Missouri.

Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, said that Missouri's present law limits, "possiblities for expansion of service."

He appeared as one of a panel of three to explain a proposed recodification of state library laws and to explain the bill to be submitted in the Missouri legislature. With him were Dominic Troiani and Phillip Maxeiner, St. Louis attorneys who drafted it.

Franklin Struwe, vice president of the public library board, introduced O'Halloran.

The Missouri Library Association has endorsed the proposed new library law and O'Halloran said that 30 librarians in the state helped draft it.

"In 20 years Missouri libraries have made incredible progress," O'Halloran said. "Ninety per cent of the people are served by a library. Libraries have moved out of cities to serve the people in outlying regions."

He said that Missouri was "the only state with a constitutional provision for state support of libraries."

In answer to a question by City Manager W. Raymert Miller, O'Halloran said that "Sikeston might become a part of something bigger" under the proposed new law.

Under the terms of the law, however, Sikeston could continue to obtain state aid for its municipal library. The proposed law permits such aid for city libraries having 5,000 or more inhabitants, which levy a two - mill tax. Sikeston qualifies on both counts.

Under the law the library board would operate as a separate unit from city government.

Sikeston could join another county or counties or become part of a Scott county library system if a majority voted for it or by joint action of library boards.

Under the bill existing libraries would not be disturbed but because small municipal libraries would not qualify for state aid the formation of larger library districts would be encouraged.

Librarians or library officials attending the meeting were from Cape Girardeau, Marble Hill, Poplar Bluff, Potosi, Bufordville, Gordonville, Van Buren, Dexter, Jackson, Charleston, Leopold, New Madrid and Perryville as well as Sikeston.

FRANKLIN STRUWE, vice president of the public library board, left, stands beside Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, who came to Sikeston last night to explain a proposed new Missmuci library law to Southeast Missouri library officials.

Crop Diversion Funds Not Sufficient for Demands

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, (AP) — The Agriculture Department faces the possibility of having to say "no" to some farmers who have indicated they would like to retire additional cropland from production for 5 to 10 years in return for government payments.

It reported today that 74,033 applications had been turned in by Jan. 12 for putting 5,968,549 acres of cropland under the program designed to help prevent overproduction of crops and to provide land for recreation, wildlife habitat, erosion control, open space and natural beauty.

Congress had authorized a limit of $80 million to cover payments this year on land diverted from crops. Officials estimated however, that it would take about $133 million to cover present applications.

And even more applications may come in because farmers have until March 3 to submit them.

The department emphasized, however, that no contracts with farmers have been signed yet. In view of this, it said, there could be substantial withdrawals as farmers determine the application of the program to their farms.

Officials said that if the total offers exceed available funds, it may become necessary to determine which of the applications should be accepted to accomplish the various objectives of the program. Generally speaking, those who filed earlier would be the first to get contracts.

Last year, about 36,000 agreements covering about 2 million acres of land were accepted by the department.

The department said that an additional 1,324,051 acres were being offered for retirement by farmers this year under supplemental agreement which would allow free public use of the land for hunting, fishing, trapping and hiking.

UFOs Seen In Sky

A 15-year-old boy returning home from a neighborhood grocery store Thursday evening lost control of his bicycle and struck a fence off West Murray Lane near the Southwest school.

His attention had been fixed on a "hovering green object with flashing red lights."

The youth's younger brother was awaiting his return in the back yard of a residence at 837 Wayne. The boy was straddling a wood picket fence and watching "a green object with a red light in the middle of it."

Four other boys playing scootball under floodlights in the same back yard were distracted by the light.

Gary Byrd, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Byrd, 613 Carroll, picked up his bicyle, and hurried to the yard, where his brother Jessie Lee, 8, was standing.

"I asked Danny Russell if he saw it. And he said he had," Burd said.

The Russell youth was one of the four boys playing scootball.

The boys said they first saw the object at about 5:45 p.m. It seemed to be almost straight above the school when it was hovering, Byrd said.

Both he and his brother gave similar descriptions of the ob-

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Rex Whitton has returned to Independence. It is Missouri's gain and the nation's loss.

For six dynamic years he served as federal highway administrator. He provided leadership for the development of the interstate highway system in the federal role in constructing the interstate road network and in setting and maintaining standards for it.

With great administrative skill and expert engineering application, Whitton served the country with distinction.

His office disbursed millions of dollars without a suggestion of misappropriation of funds or hint of scandal.

Missourians are proud of the record.

Sikeston residents always have taken a personal interest in Whitton's career because he is familiar with our flora and fauna.

Briefly in the 1920s he was district 10 construction engineer. He left Sikeston for the Jefferson City headquarters, where he served for a decade as chief engineer of the Missouri state highway department before moving on to Washington, D. C.

His public career has been notable for the progress made in highway development both in Missouri and throughout the nation.

Whitton will not be idle.

He has joined a large private engineering firm in Kansas City and has many interests in Missouri.

All citizens of the state will benefit from the knowledge he gained in a long and useful career of public service at the state and national levels.

Welcome home Rex.

Clyde Poe is dead. His friends are sorry but he lived a long life, which speaks eloquently for him while he is silent.

Clyde was an excellent listener, a humble, modest man.

Too few mortals pattern their lives after him but he served others well, built friendships, was highly respected and served others with quiet dedication.

By temperament and habit he was almost an ideal funeral director.

He possessed the ability to be a friend to others to an uncommon degree.

He inspired confidence and transmitted understanding, and he was able to draw sorrow quietly from the bereaved.

He was unusually gifted in this respect. The same qualities, which made him an effective funeral director, served him well during almost a quarter of a century as coroner.

Clyde was not a man to rush into a conversation, to impress others with what he knew, to throw his weight or authority around. He merely was dependably there when he was needed, eager to listen, to dispense with understanding and comfort if the occasion required it.

His stewardship in church and community affairs was in keeping with his business personality. He made friends everywhere he went without bombast.

To an uncommon degree in a world that is largely materialistic, full of sales gimmicks and showmanship, and often selfish, he contributed humility, service and love of mankind.

His friends will miss him.

Just how important is a small newspaper advertisement?

"The newspaper advertisement is a written promise to the prospect which is officially signed by the advertiser with his logotype," said one man who is in charge of advertising for more than 5,000 food stores placing ads in 3,000 newspapers each week. To him each advertisement is a serious effort.

"The ad is a real document - a contract - sober, responsible, considered," he said. "It represents an irreplaceable contract between buyer and seller."

The public is not easily duped, and today's merchants know it. The steady decline of fraudulent and misleading advertisements in recent years attests to a well-educated consuming public and a more honest group of businessmen.

Consumers are more likely to believe what they see in print - and for good reason. A newspaper ad offers time and space to fully describe products.

Real bargains are easily recognized in the newspaper, and the consumer can fully satisfy himself about quality and usefulness of the product. Honesty of claims can be thoroughly checked.

Newspapers not only have a "responsibility" to keep distasteful advertising out of print, but they have a "right" to do so, a Pennsylvania Common Pleas Judge said recently. Most publishers feel it is their responsibility to protect customers.

For practical reasons, there is no better place for consumers to find a competent listing of reliable products than in the advertising columns of local newspapers. It pays the retailer, the consumer and the public.

Spurred on by ever-mounting traffic tolls, the American auto industry is increasingly turning its attention to the problems of driving safety.

Ford is spending in excess of $1,000,000 in a nationwide advertising campaign promoting safety. The money is paying for a giant-sized advertisement - actually a booklet - entitled "A Positive View of Good Driving Habits." The ad is being run in several important national publications.

Likewise, General Motors is handing out a million copies of a booklet entitled "Designs for Safety," which lists the corporation's contribution to safety over the years. GM has also begun a series of institutional ads on auto safety which the company says will reach 28,000,000 persons.

Oil industry firms are climbing on the safety wagon too. Mobil is running a series of ads that will give drivers tips on how to avoid accidents.

The aim of all this effort seems to make the habits of American drivers safer.

On the other side of the coin, a one-time Washington lawyer named Ralph Nader has written a book titled "Unsafe at Any Speed" which calls for radical changes in the American automobile to produce safer driving.

Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana has called for expanding the Interstate Highway system from its current projected 41,000 miles to 66,000 miles as a prime method of reducing highway carnage. The Senator cited the much higher fatality rate on two-lane conventional highways during the last Christmas and New Years holidays. Only six per cent of the grim holiday total of 1,287 traffic deaths occurred on the Interstate System, Bureau of Public Roads figures show.

All this seems to indicate that there are still three basic ingredients in highway safety - the driver, the vehicle and the road. For safer driving, we need improvement in all three.

LONDON (AP) —Britain's National Childbirth Trust has just given birth to a booklet of advice for expectant fathers.

That's right -- expectant fathers.

If the father-to-be has not yet been seized by the jitters of approaching parenthood, this well-intended and generally helpful pamphlet, should do much to produce them.

For instance, he is advised to take a firm line with his wife when she begins talking about buying a baby carriage.

The National Childbirth Trust says the husband should be able to talk his wife out of buying the perambulator of her heart's desire unless it will, or will not, do certain things.

Father-to-be is told that the baby carriages with weak, or poor brakes is not a good buy. If this is his first baby, who's to help with the testing?

The booklet counsels the expectant father to organize his wife for the coming blessed event by getting her to apply some time and motion studies to such things as feeding, bathing and cleaning the baby.

More frightening than this, however, is the recommendation that the expectant father should join the expectant mother in the daily exercises she is expected to do.

Among other chores the expectant father is advised to assume is a more careful attitude towards the family automobile, such as nightly checks of the tires, battery, gasoline and oil.

He is told to learn in advance the quickest and smoothest route to the hospital.

As almost any father knows, there are times before the great event when time hangs heavy on his hands as well as his wife's.

"Keep yourself amused with light household chores, music, or a game of cards," is the advice to husbands.

If the expectant father assumes that his ordeal is over with the baby's arrival, then he is wrong.

The trust says that after the birth, father should buy more books about babies, suggesting such fascinating titles as "the First Nine Months of Life," and "Caring for the New Baby."

The booklet also suggests that the husband of a working wife, one who has given up a job to have a baby, should give his wife a personal weekly allowance to "spend as she pleases."

Having money of her own, says the trust, is probably the best tonic of all.

Three girls and a man were brought before the presiding judge. The girls had been arrested for soliciting and the man was arrested for peddling without a license.

"What do you do for a living?" the judge asked, pointing to the first girl.

"Your honor, I'm a model," she answered.

"Thirty days," was the sentence. Then he turned to the second. "What do you do for a living?" he asked.

"Your honor, I'm a T.V. actress."

"Thirty days." Then he turned to the third girl. "What do you do for a living?" he demanded.

"To tell you the truth," she answered, "I'm a prostitute."

"For telling the truth," he said, "I'm going to suspend sentence." Then he turned to the little peddler. "And you," he said, "what do you do for a living?"

"To tell you the truth," the peddler said, twisting his hat in his hands, "I'm a prostitute also."

MAKING THE MOST OF THE TOOLS

No one, except the most dedicated of socialized power advocates, can any longer doubt the ability of the investor - owned electric utilities to meet any and all of the needs of this nation. That power is supplied at rates regulated by public bodies -- rates which allow only for the costs of providing service plus a very modest profit. And, in the process, the utilities are among the largest and most dependable payers of taxes to governments at all levels in every section of the country.

An outstanding example of progress in which utilities have played a leading role is the production of power from nuclear sources. Not long ago, many thought it would be years before such power was economically feasible. But, one by one, and more swiftly than was generally believed at the beginning, the problems have been solved and the barriers eliminated or lowered. Today, in many areas nuclear power is becoming competitive in cost with power from conventional fuels.

New York is now providing another example of this. There the Consolidated Edison Company's board of trustees have authorized the construction of a nuclear generating unit having an initial rating of 873,000 kilowatts. Operation is scheduled for the spring of 1969. It will be an all-nuclear installation, powered by a pressurized water reactor. And it is a very big undertaking indeed, with the cost estimated at $108 million.

This illustrates the way investor-owned utilities the nation over anticipate the needs of the future and prepare for them. And they make the most of every available tool, whether it be new or old.

A lady who prides herself on her immaculate housekeeping was horrified when she saw a mouse run across her living room floor. Calling her daughter, she said, "I want you to go right down to the hardware store and buy some mousetraps. But for goodness' sake," she added, "don't tell them what they're for!"

Martha and Abe had been married for some time and to Abe's chagrin, Martha no longer had as much enthusiasm as she had once for fun and games in bed. One night, not long ago, when Abe was making love to her, he suddenly said, "Is something wrong? are you hurt?"

"Of course not," snapped Martha.

"Why do you ask?"

"Oh," replied Abe wistfully, "I just thought for a moment there, that you moved."

NEW ANTI-RIGHT GROUP

Not so many years ago American collectivists often accused the American Right, by which they meant all who love their country and the values of individual self-reliance and personal enterprise on which it was built, of using "guilt by association" to condemn others. Now, guilt by association has become a principal stock in trade of the collectivists themselves.

Four years ago a shadowy and secretive organization with the bland title of Group Research, Inc. opened an office in Washington. Its purpose soon proved to be to condemn every group and individual who spoke out strongly for individual liberty and patriotism, by linking the speakers with other groups and individuals who were unpopular or irresponsible. This guilt by association was based on the flimsiest evidence, where they was any evidence to support it at all. But it had a measurable impact on public opinion.

Edith Kermit Roosevelt, in her columns, alerted her readers to Group Research, Inc. Group Research, Inc. has been less active recently, but a new anti-Right group has been established in Washington. It is called the Institute for American Democracy. It plans a fulltime program of attack and harassment upon patriotic and pro-freedom groups and speakers, which it chooses to call "extremist." In what has become an all too familiar fashion, the Institute for American Democracy uses that hollow word "extremist" to describe any and every organization and activity on the Right of which it disapproves.

The Institute for American Democracy has already announced plans to ask for censorship of what it calls "right-wing" radio broadcasts by the Federal Communications Commission. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Prosecutors Predict Return of Murder, Inc. Style Of Racketeering When the "Bug" is Banned.

Washington, D.C.: -- A flash: We could have gotten Murder, Inc.'s fire fourth of old style Murder, Inc. -- labor-industrial syndicated racketeering -- is being predicted by doleful federal and state prosecutors.

They talk of the swift return of deported Mafia chiefs such as "Mr. A" Joe "Adonis" Doto, now legendary and almost forgotten though he rode high alongside the Murder, Inc. executioners.

These are the millionaire Cosa Nostra men who were traced, trapped and finally exiled, convicted or executed by the state on the basis of wiretapping evidence.

Now all these thousands of cases are under review by the Justice Dept. -- and even if there is the barest mention of a single name and then only for a single moment and the convicted one is alive, the sentence may well be reversed and the prisoner freed or his deportation order lifted.

Furthermore the prosecutors with whom I've talked over the past few weeks see the end of their ability to "get into the crime syndicate inner sanctum or to keep a 24-hour surveillance of organized crime leaders still milking unions, labor welfare and pension funds and private business."

They see new laws coming which will outlaw electronic or wiretap eavesdropping in all but investigation into threats to the national security.

Just the other day in a long conversation with N.Y. Congressman Emanuel Celler, the influential head of the powerful House Judiciary Committee, this was corroborated.

"I will push a bill," said Mr. Celler, dean of the House "which will ban the use of of all wiretapping and electronic listening except in cases of national emergency and security involving treason and sabotage. This will ban wiretapping and the electronic stuff even in the fight against organized crime."

The venerable Congressman said his old friend, J. Edgar Hoover would testify "reasonably soon" at Committee hearings.

During this column's survey of the use of wiretapping and electronic gadgetry in the struggle with organized crime's executives in charge of the labor front, several intriguing documents cropped up. One was a report from New York's crusading District Attorney Frank Hogan, who has been battling the big time rackets for 25 years, you know, ever since the colorful days which now make TV scripts.

In this document Mr. Hogan reveals that the law never could have cracked Murder Inc.; convicted the late world narcotics chief "Lucky" Luciano, who introduced wholesale murder and muscle into the labor arena; never could have sent Chief Louis "Lepke" Buchalter to the death chamber; never could have sent up "Lepke's" partner "Gurrah" Shapiro; never could have imprisoned the food market's monopolist and terrorist of labor leaders, Joe "Socks" Lanza; never could have convicted the still free acidity Johnny Dio -- without wiretapping.

Wiretaps, says Mr. Hogan, "have been invaluable in exposing racketeering in certain union welfare funds." On the basis of "intercepted conversations," he adds, his office established a conspiracy involving "the notorious George Scalise, a powerful racketeer who seized unions, and others who milked the fund of over $300,000. Behind them was "the gun," the late "Little Augie" Pisano, who departed this earth loaded with instant lead.

It was not only Mr. Hogan who thus penetrated the inner sanctums. There was the Justice Dept. during Bob Kennedy's years.

In a report, made not long before he stepped down, the then Attorney General said the government knew "that in the past two years at least three carefully planned (Cosa Nostra national) Commission meetings had to be called off because the leaders learned that we had uncovered their well-concealed plans and meeting places. We know that because of federal intelligence efforts other Commission meetings have been limited to one or two members and have been held in highly clandestine fashion."

These Commission members to which Bob Kennedy referred are the men who direct the racketeers who seize unions and their funds and who are described today by the highest law enforcement agents as "the toughest, roughest, dirtiest, below-the-belt mobsters."

"If we can't wiretap," asked the same source, "how are we going to protect labor and industry? We are in the electronic age. We can't use horse and buggies any more than the FBI could back in the thirties when the racketeers began using short wave radios, fast cars and machine guns.

"We had to watch them. If we don't move along with them today, if we can't get into their inner sanctums, we might as well go read Sherlock Holmes and the public better be prepared for the return of those old bloody days -- tell that to the labor and business leaders."

Thus the mood is melancholy amongst those who mourn of the passing of the bug and warn of the return of the pestilence.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - Toughest battler in the U.S. Senate is a man who doesn't talk much about his battles. He is the number two Republican, Sen. Tom Kuchel of California.

Most of his Senate colleagues don't know it, but Sen. Kuchel last year turned down an offer of $175,000 a year for ten years to become head of the Motion Picutre Producers Association, a job which later went to LBJ's right-hand man, Jack Valenti.

Kuchel vetoed the job not because he shied away from association with the acting profession. He already associates with his Republican colleague in the Senate, George Murphy, a former tap-dancer. Another actor, Ronald Reagan, hero of many westerns, has just been elected Republican governor of California.

Rather, Kuchel vetoed the job because he didn't want to run away from a fight. He knew right-wing Republicans were out to get him in 1968, and a victory by them would mean the end of the Liberal Republicanism which elected Hiram Johnson, Earl Warren, Goodwin Knight and Kuchel in California.

Once before, the right wing tried to smear Kuchel with a below-the-belt story about his life. He forced a showdown. Result: Three men were convicted for criminal libel.

There will be another tough political showdown in California next year, and Kuchel once more expects to win.

ADAM'S PROFESSION

Rep. John Brademas of South Bend, Ind., was concerned over educational problems back in his district and dropped in to see the Chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem. There was wrath in Brademas's eye, because he had warned the chairman that educational snafus were likely to happen.

Before he could express that wrath, however, the chairman thrust a glass of champagne in his hand.

"Sit down, John, and cool off before you express yourself," said Mr. Powell.

Brademas sat down in one of the overstuffed leather chairs in the chairman's office. He looked up at the paneled walls, the high ceiling, the perfect appointments.

"Good lord, Adam, how do you do it?" asked the congressman from South Bend.

"Working for Jesus," replied the congressman from Harlem.

TWO MISSING VOTES

Lurleen Wallace, the new governess of Alabama, got some under-the-breath criticism from Texas and Dixiecrat congressmen who otherwise would have been rooting for her on the day she was inaugurated.

They attributed to her the fact that they lost the chance to stack the Powerful Ways and Means Committee with a Southerner, Rep. Omar Burleson of Texas. Instead, a New York Liberal Democrat, Jacob Gilbert of the Bronx, was elected to the Key Committee which not only initiates all tax and fiscal legislation but selects which Democrats shall sit on what committees.

The vote in the Democratic caucus for Gilbert instead of Burleson was 115 to 113. The two missing votes which would have swung the balance were those of two Alabama Congressmen, Armistead Selden and George Andrews. They had gone down to Montgomery to pay tribute to the new governess of Alabama as she took the oath of office. Their absence will influence the voting in key committes for the next two years.

LBJ'S MESSAGES

Comments that LBJ's state of the union message was too long and that some congressmen got tired of listening, inspired us to do some research.

It didn't take any wiretapping or bugging to find that the president's message was 5,981 words long and that it lasted approximately one hour and 10 mumutes. Of course part of this time was taken up with applause - exactly 47 interruptions.

As to how long each interruption lasted, we could get no exact information, but probably averaged about 10 seconds. It was Sen. George Aiken, the gnarled Republican orchardist from Vermont, who, sitting in the front row, usually led the applause. Aiken comes from a state which has gone Republican oftener than any other in the union, nevertheless he seemed to like what the Democratic president said.

Bobby Kennedy, a Democratic Senator from N. Y., did not appear to like it so much. He did not applaud when the president came out vigorously against wiretapping.

Further research disclosed the fact that the late John F. Kennedy's state of the union messages had run longer than Johnson's 5,981 words - namely 7,000 words in 1961, 7,500 words in 1962 and 6,400 in 1963. His average was 6,967 words.

IKE WAS WORDY

Eisenhower was wordier. Ike delivered nine state of the union messages for an average of 7,610 words. Johnson's average for four speeches has been 5,695.

But Harry Truman, supposed to be a succinct guy, more adept at Missouri mule driver language than eloquent oratory, topped them all. In Harry's first message in 1946, just after assuming the presidency, he gave the Congress 24,000 words on the state of the union.

After this, Harry learned his lesson and dropped to 7,647 in 1947.

When Eisenhower first assumed office in 1953, he bored Congress with a total of 10,812 words.

Roosevelt's state of the union messages were the shortest. They generally ran to around 3,000 to 4,000 words. His shortest was in 1934 - only 2,574; his longest was the last - 9,720 words, delivered in 1945, four months before he died.

Mrs. Paul N. Taylor

Miss Connie Louise Chaney Weds Paul Taylor Saturday

POPLAR BLUFF -- The marriage of Miss Connie Louise Chaney and Paul N. Taylor was solemnized at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night in the First Baptist church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Gilbert before a background composed of lighted white tapers in two branched candelabra and greenery, flanked by spiral candelabra. Centering the arrangement was the prie dieu. Marking the bridal aisle were single candelabra, adorned with greenery.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Chaney of Poplar Bluff, formerly of Sikeston. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Alcorn of Sikeston and the niece of Darrell, Dale, and C. D. Alcorn, all of Sikeston and Delmar Alcorn of Bertrand. Taylor's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Taylor.

Van Chaney, brother of the bride, organist, and Miss Margaret Miller, pianist, played a program of prenuptial music and the traditional wedding marches. Miss Miller also accompanied Chaney as he sang "More" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, Saturday's bride wore a wedding gown of Alencon lace over peau de soie. The long sleeved dress was styled on sheath lines with Empire waistline, accented at the waistline and around the scooped, scalloped neckline with pearl embroidered motifs of the lace. Her long train of lace over tulle was scalloped and edged with the pearl embroidered motifs of lace. Her bouffant shoulder-length veil of illusion was caught to a pearl outlined flower with the petals filled in with the lace motifs. Her gown and veil were designed and fashioned by the mother. The bride carried a white Bible, crested with an arrangement of white roses. Miss Joie Morrison, maid of honor, and Miss Carolyn Newkirk, Miss Terry Rounsaville, Poplar Bluff, and Miss Jeannie Studebaker, Hazelwood, bridesmaids, were gowned alike. The moss green velvet boices with Venice lace encircling the Empire waistlines, had elbow-length sleeves, circled with lace and accented with matching ruffles. The long slim skirts were of moss green crepe and each wore matching green accessories. Their headpieces were large moss green velvet cabbage roses and short bouffant veils. The honor attendant carried a crescent bouquet of tangerine color carnations and the bridesmaids carried nosegays of the same flowers. Their gowns and headpiece were also designed and made by Mrs. Chaney.

Miss Tammy McDonald of Sikeston, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and was attired in a long, moss green velvet dress made on the same lines as the adult attendants' and her headpiece was also similar.

Candles were lighted by Denny Alcorn of Sikeston and Alan Kindred of Kennett, cousins of the bride.

Taylor chose Bill O'Connor as his best man and Carol Taylor, his brother, Paul Arnold and Lonnie King as groomsmen. Taylor and Arnold also seated the guests.

Mrs. Chaney selected for her daughter's wedding a two-piece beige lace dress over matching taffeta. The bodice was scalloped at the waistline and sleeves. Her accessories were beige and her corsage was of green cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue dress, trimmed in matching lace, and red accessories. Her corsage was of white cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Carol Taylor, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was at the guest book at a table covered with white satin and tulle, and adorned with a miniature bridal bouquet.

A reception was given in the fellowship room of the church where the bride's table was covered with a long white satin cloth, covered with white tulle caught up with white satin cabbage roses, ferns and white ribbon streamers. The table was graced with a four-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, and a lovely arrangement of white carnations in a silver container. Another table, covered with white satin and tulle, held a crystal punch bowl, encircled with greenery, and flanked with lighted white tapers in white satin cabbage rose holders nestled in greenery.

Mrs. O. C. Cutsinger and Mrs. Jesse Sconce were in charge of the reception and were assisted by Mrs. Jean Russell, Mrs. Detroy Hill and Mrs. Ernest Hammons. Guests were served by Miss Myrna Warren, Miss Susan Walker, Miss Joy Legate, Mrs. David Vick and Miss Vicky and Miss Dianne Taylor, sisters of the bridegroom.

After a honeymoon to an undisclosed destination, Taylor and his bride will live in a new mobile home at the Northwold Trailer Court. For travel the new Mrs. Taylor wore a blue and green three-piece knit suit with matching accessories. Her white rose corsage was from her bridal bouquet.

The former Miss Chaney was graduated from Poplar Bluff high school with the class of 1964, attended Arkansas State College in Jonesboro, and is presently employed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Taylor, a 1962 graduate of the high school, served a four year tour of duty with the air force. He is employed by the Public Finance Corporation.

Other out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Alcorn, Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Alcorn, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Alcorn, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Alcorn, Mr. and Mrs. Lester McDonald, Mrs. Ted Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woods and Mrs. Michael McDonald, Sikeston; Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Alcorn, Bertrand; Mrs. Aubrey Michael Jr. and Stephanie, Mrs. John Healy, Mrs. Grace Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Alcorn, Dexter; Mr. and Mrs. Gene Kindred, Kennett; Mr. and Mrs. Don Taylor, Caruthersville; Mrs. John Turner, Memphis, and Mrs. Charley Benson, Stuttgart, Ark.

She spoke of things of long ago
They were as yesterday.
She told of a dream:
It was a September.
And it was not really warm until noon.
I had been sitting in the sun, she said.
I could hear a crow across the field.
On the trellis there were new roses.
I was sitting in the sun,
And he brought me three fresh pears from the tree in the far pasture.

Consolation Championships Tonight At Kelly High

BENTON -- The stage is set for Saturday night's finals in both the A and B bracket, of the Scott - Mississippi conference basketball tournament. Oran, Illmo - Scott City, and Scott Central won semi-final round games and advanced into the finals.

Illmo - Scott City posted the first upset of the tournament last night as it toppled second - seeded Delta 39-31 in the B bracket, moving Delta into the consolation bracket where tey will meet Scott Central at 7 p.m. tonight.

The two - semi - final round games in the A bracket saw favored teams advance. Oran swept past Delta 74-49 and Scott Central contained Illmo - Scott City and beat them 48-42.

Tonight's action at the Thomas B. Kelly high school will be in the consolation bracket playoffs as Scott Central and Delta open the night followed by the Delta and Illmo-Scott City varsity playoff at 8:30 p.m.

The Oran Eagles, on their way to defending their tournament title, had an easy time downing the Delta Bobcats as they defensed their way into a 20-6 first quarter lead and held a 30-21 lead at intermission.

Their usual fine defense, rebounding, and out-court shooting pushed the Eagles ahead early in the game. They held it throughout the contest.

Oran's big quarter was its fourth. The Eagles racked up 33-points while Delta hit 20 to account for its large lead at the end of the game.

Without the services of Below and Cook the last four minutes of the fourth quarter, the Bobcats found themselves without their rebound and shooting power, causing them to allow Oran their big quarter. They received their fifth foul and were forced to leave the game.

John and Fred Johnson continued to pace the Eagles in both the scoring and rebound departments. They hit 22 and 17 points respectively and pulled 14 and 18 rebounds respectively.

Jim Below topped the Bobcats scoring, netting six field goals and nine free throws for 21 points.

The second game in which the only tournament upset was scored found Illmo - Scott City jumping out into a 12-5 first quarter lead and controlled the ball and rebounds throughout.

ISC led most of the game but was threatened at the end of the third quarter as Delta closed to within two points--23-25 -- but was never able to overcome the Rams' lead.

Delta found the Rams cold in the third quarter and poured in 11 points while holding ISC to five to close to within five points.

Gibson hit 13 points and Cummins pumped in 11 to lead the Rams to their upset victory.

McIntosh netted 14 points to take high game scoring honors for Delta.

In perhaps the best game of the tournament, the Scott County Central high school Braves made believers out of a few fans as they defeated Illmo-Scott City 48-42 to move into the championship finals.

A 22-point performance by Central's Gary Owens was the spark plug which ignited the Braves flame early in the game.

Scott County Central's win can be attributed to their excellent defense in which they stopped the Rams' Crabtree and held him to 18 points, and good shooting and rebounding.

Jumping into a 15-12 first quarter lead, the Scott Central Braves never trailed in the contest as they held from a two to six-point lead throughout.

Both teams were cold from the floor, but most of that can be attributed to each team's defense. They both played tight defense.

Both teams committed few floor mistakes as Central won on their rebounding power.

Crabtree led the ISC Rams in the scoring column netting 18 points but the Rams Sanford played a good game all the way around as he hit clutch baskets and collected clutch rebounds to keep the Rams in contention.

Owens led Central with 22 points.

KANSAS CITY AP - The Kansas City Chiefs, champions of the American Football League, have sold or renewed 21,961 season tickets for 1967, surpassing sales for the entire 1966 season when 21,949 tickets were sold.

(NEA Telephoto)

NEW MAN AND NEW TOGS were unveiled in Kansas City, Mo., by Athletics owner Charles Finley, right. Finley and Allan Sydney Lewis, the "Panamanian Express" from Colon, Panama, look over the white shoes the Athletics will be wearing instead of the usual black during the coming season. Lewis moves up from Leesburg, Fla., where he stole 116 bases in 131 games with the Florida State League.

Swing Along With Ted
by Ted Williams

THREE-HEADED COINS

There are more than two sides to a coin. The HEAD side in the Super Bowl showed that the N.F.L. had all the class, strength and determination. Luck was not involved in the Packers' win. They were simply a great team and they were not about to part with $15,000 to any other team. Add the shopworn phrase of "class always tells" and you have the HEAD side.

The TAIL side grudgingly admits the Packers won. Any of the Chiefs' attempts to use an alibi such as the interception of Dawson's pass or the fact that at half-time the score was still human, 14-10, is only met by laughts from the N.F.L. fans. So goes the TAIL side.

The third side has no name since it comprises many other things, the first being, simply enough, that this was only the first Super Bowl game. One win doesn't really prove anything except for this year. The Packers are the best no matter what. But intangibles always exist. And how many times has the "sure thing" blown apart? The Dodgers four game sweep over the Yanks, the Orioles four game sweep over the Dodgers, Clay's first fight with Liston, etc. The heady smell of victory lasts only until the new season begins and once again everyone is equal. But for now the Packers deserve the accolades and the Chiefs the catcalls. That's the way it goes.

But the third side also contains all those empty seats in the stadium. The television viewing audiences were fantastic and of course no professional sport had the payoff that this game did for the winning athletes. The losers, however, can feel pretty happy with $7,500 to count.

NBC and CBS could both smile in a sense. This was the first time that the fans couldn't get another football game if they switched channels. You had to watch the commercials unless you turned to catch the ending of the 76'ers beating the Celtics.

Talking about "class," the Boston Celtics stand on the verge of losing all the way in the NBA. Unless, of course, as with last year, they beat the 76'ers in the play-offs and that would be a major sport. The NBA hit one sour note in the recent All-Star game when "Red" Auerbach was tossed out for committing two technicals. In a regular game that's one thing, but in the All-Star throw the coach out. Even all the bright talk about the NBA expanding and growing by leaps and bounds will not attract fans when a silly move like tossing out the coach in an All-Star game is made.

Hockey, meanwhile, keeps growing the smart way. In New York alone, the lines of people waiting to buy tickets for the rest of the Ranger home games show that the hockey people are doing the right thing. A winning, fighting team and a decent price for tickets will always bring out the fans.

I'm glad to see that Frank Robinson pulled down his well-deserved $100,000. Salary battles will probably not be as prevalent as in the past, and professional football's high salaries and bonuses may be the reason why many of the top baseball performers will find it easier this year to sign.

Cape Indians Seek Revenge

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Southeast Missouri State takes on Western Illinois University here Saturday at 8 p.m., looking for revenge for last year's 84-81 loss on the Western Illinois floor.

In that fracas, the Leathernecks came back from a whopping 51-35 half-time deficit to garner their 3-point win, turning the trick with an aggressive effort that netted 60 rebounds to the 49 of the Indians.

The Western Illinois crew, under veteran coach Leroy Morley, have chalked up a basketball rarity this season, winning only three and losing 10 -- all 10 losses on their own court. Of the three victories, two have been over common opponents with coach Charles Parsley's Indian squad.

Western easily handled Eastern Illinois on the Eastern court, 89-75, and topped Northeast Missouri 66-65. The Indians beat Eastern twice, 86-74 and 73-72, and thumped Kirksville 9--76.

In its last outing, the Indians played flawless ball in burying an outclassed McKendree College team, 135-78. The final score was a team record at Cape, while 6-6 center Kermit Meystedt was also setting a school individual record with 52 points and 24 field goals. Meystedt's effort clipped a mark of 47 points set here in 1961 by all-American Bill Giesing.

Senior guard Curtis Williams -- a 6-8 high-jumper on the track squad despite his 5-11 height -- is second in scoring with 18.7 per game, followed by forward Dan Milligan with 13.0 and playmaker-guard Charlie Bertrand with 12.6.

Cape's record going into Saturday's game stands at 9-2. Western took its 3-10 record into a 2-night tournament at Freeport, Ill., prior to their Cape visit.

Finals Tonight In Ozark Conference Tournament

ZALMA - Four games are scheduled for tonight with the first basketball game starting at 5 p.m. in the Ozark Conference tournament final night.

In last night's semi-final action, Broseley crept past Neelyville 35-34 in the B bracket and Leopold upset number two seeded Broseley 57-55 in A bracket play.

Tonight's first game pits College high against Neelyville in the 5 p.m. game. This contest is for the consolation championship of the B bracket. In the second game, Patton and Broseley meet at 6:30 p.m. for the consolation championship of the A bracket.

Tonight's finals begin at 8 p.m. when Patton and Broseley square off for the championship of the B bracket followed by the 9:30 p.m. meeting of first-seeded Naylor against upset-minded Leopold.

Morris' 17-point production was enough to lead the Tigers to their B bracket victory and into the championship playoffs.

Neelyville's Serratt and Wills 13 points each weren't enough to spare them from their one-point defeat.

Broseley jumped into a 14-6 first quarter lead but slackened the next three points and almost found themselves defeated as Neelyville got hot the last half and outscored their opponents 24-16 but was never able to pull out the victory.

In the biggest upset of the tournament the Leopold quintet, after being down 20-10 at the end of the first quarter, turned on the steam the next three quarters, took the lead at the opening of the fourth quarter and went on to win.

Stan Elfrink's 24 points combined with two other double figure scorers led the Wildcats to their upset victory.

Broseley's Page and Taylor netted 25 and 11 points respectively but found themselves short one double figure man and wnet down to defeat.

Leopold held a six-point lead with five minutes remaining to go in the last five minutes but held on for their slim lead.

Ron Jaynes SPORTS CORNER

Here we are....back again with our little Devil.

Since the first of the year our little...friend...has dropped from 86.7 per cent to 81.3 per cent and he is hoping to improve tonight...but...taking a look at the schedule he has some wonders about that...and the way he's been predicting, we think he will be facing his biggest problem of the year.. tonight's roundball action.

Most of tonight's action is wound around conference play and the two tournaments in our area.

Before we go into tonight's predictions we want to tell a few of you people that this column is designed for enjoyment and is not meant to make fun or to antagonize anyone... so...if you dislike the column or dislike it please let us know so we will know whether to continue it or drop it...

Here are tonight's roundball predictions....

Poplar Bluff at Kennett - We thought earlier in the year that the Indians might knock off the high flying Mules...but the way they have been playing lately we have been wondering...they are capable if any team in the area is...the question is will they play ball and do it?...we think not. Poplar Bluff 53, Kennett 47.

Bell City at Richland - We underestimated the Cubs in their last game...when they played Puxico and we do not plan to do it twice in a row... We think the Cubs will win over the Rebs for the second time this season. Bell City 68, Richland 61.

Parma at Matthews - A New Madrid county conference game that might as well not be played...The Pirates have begun to play ball but not the kind of ball that can beat the wheeling-dealing Pirates. Matthews 82, Parma 66.

Malden at Sikeston - This should be a rather interesting contest...Both teams are well matched and have showed up good in their last two games... Sikeston has the home court advantage and should eke out a rather easy win...But...Malden has been known to be explosive and you just can't hardly tell about them...so...anyway we'll go along with the Bulldogs, Sikeston 64, Malden 58.

Hayti Central at Holcomb - We haven't heard or seen much of Central but if they are anything like Howardville we would take them...but...since we are not sure...we'll take a stab in the dark and say Holcomb, mostly on their past performance. Holcomb 81, Hayti Central 75.

Puxico at Bloomfield - Those Wildcats will have their hands full but we just don't know how to go in this contest...since we are unsure if the Cats big Williamson will be back in the lineup...if he is, there is just not much question but if he's not there, there is a question... We will stick our necks out again and say...Puxico 54, Bloomfield 52.

New Madrid at Fisk - Both teams are having their troubles this season...and...so tonight we will let them both fight it out to see who has got the worst. We think Fisk has the worst trouble and we see the Indians winning over the Pirates. New Madrid 66, Fisk 63.

Clarkton at Hayti North - Those Reindeer are unpredictable if any team has ever been...they will play the sox off of one of the top teams and then get the sox taken off of them by some unrated teams...we just don't know what to think...Hayti North 88, Clarkton 65.

Senath-H'ville at Deering - This should be another one of those games between schools that have been having their troubles. We think Deering has the height and poise to defeat the Lions...Deering 60, Senath-H'ville 53.

South-Pemiscot at Campbell - We sort of crossed our wires last week when we said the southern part of Pemiscot was having their troubles we had the North in mind ...please forgive us Coach Jerry Sinko... We know you have a good record...but what we were thinking about was your loss to the North in the Senath-H'ville tournament...You will have your hands full tonight but since we underrated your team last week we can't possibly do it twice in a row so...South Pemiscot 59, Campbell 54.

Gideon at Portageville - A win by either team means

EM's New Listener, Advisor

At the end of 1965, Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge had just returned to the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam after being cheered by 70,000 fans during half-time at Legion Field stadium in Birmingham, Ala.

On the last day of 1966, he was cheered by the spectators who lined the streets in Dallas, Tex., to watch him lead the Cotton Bowl Parade as Grand Marshal of the pageant.

The cheers in Birmingham were in response to the military efforts of Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge and the Big Red One Division, which had been adopted by the city during the half-time ceremonies.

The cheers in Dallas stemmed from the new responsibilities the Texas-reared soldier was carrying out after becoming the first Sergeant Major of the Army in July, 1966.

As the senior enlisted advisor and consultant, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge exemplifies the Army approach in giving enlisted leaders a voice in procedures and policies which affect morale, training, pay and promotions.

To carry out his duties, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge has traveled extensively to Army units around the world, brought ideas from the field to the Army Staff, replied to every letter which comes to his Pentagon office, and presided over two sergeants major conferences.

Some of the matters discussed in November at the first Major Command Sergeants Major Conference have been reflected in Department of the Army policies affecting enlisted men.

Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge's accelerated pace of work, his 26-years of experience as a career soldier, his soldierly bearing and firm but pleasant conversational approach have won the respect of the soldiers he has met.

He has accompanied General Johnson on two tours to Vietnam—the last visit was made during Christmas—and one to West Germany. His frequent visits to stateside Army posts include one to Fort Campbell, Ky., with President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Wherever the Sergeant Major of the Army went during his first six months—to the speakers' platform at U. S. Army Association conferences, to the bedsides of wounded soldiers or the training fields at Army posts—he left the impression that he came to listen, advise and seek solutions to any enlisted man's problems. The Right to Refrain

How and Why The Advocates of Compulsory Unionism Were Beaten in 1965.

By REED LARSON

THE INCONSISTENCIES

The magnitude of political pressures brought to bear on members of Congress in the drive for repeal is illustrated by the many seeming contradictions on the part of those advocating repeal. Taking a stand to pay off campaign debts may make sense politically, but it sometimes leads to the wildest anomalies as far as logic and common sense are concerned. Because the nature of the 14 (b) battle is revealed by those contradictions, let me enumerate a few:

1. The President of the U.S. as a Congressman and as a Senator had supported Taft-Hartley and 14 (b). In his twelve years in Congress, Lyndon Johnson had never proposed any change in 14 (b). In fact, when running for re-election to the Senate LBJ said, "I have never sought nor do I seek now the support of any labor bosses dictating to free men anywhere, anytime." Yet, as President, he pushed this highly disruptive move to strike down laws and constitutional amendments in 19 states, in the name of promoting harmony.

2. Congressman Frank Thompson (D-N. J.) sponsor of the 14 (b) repeal bill in the House, poses as a "liberal" and a friend of the working man; yet he denounced rank and file union members as "skills" and "soreheads" simply because they had the courage to publicly oppose his bill legalizing compulsory unionism in every state.

3. Senator Pat McNamara, (D-Mich.), sponsor of the 14 (b) repeal bill in the Senate, is a former union official and claims to represent the interests of laboring people; yet, as chairman of the Labor Subcommittee conducting hearings on his bill, he flatly rejected the pleas of hundreds of working men and women who asked him for a chance to speak against his bill. Instead, his "bobtailed" hearings heard testimony of top union professionals whose primary interest is seeing that workers are forced to pay them dues in order to keep their jobs.

4. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, masquerading as a spokesman for the working man, asked Congress to repeal 14 (b) on the grounds that employers should be free to make agreements with union officials, forcing workers into unions against their will.

5. Attorney General Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach is supposedly the nation's watchdog against violations of federal law; yet he failed to investigate widely-published reports quoting a Democratic candidate for Congress as having been offered $10,000 by AFL-CIO for a pledge that he would support repeal of 14 (b). Such an offer, if true, would flagrantly violate the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

6. Professional spokesmen for the civil rights movement, dedicated to protection of minority rights, told Congress they were more anxious to repeal 14 (b), thus striking down laws which protect workers from discrimination because of union membership or non-membership, than they were to obtain additional legislation to limit discrimination practiced by unions against minority groups.

7. Professional spokesmen for several major religious groups told Congress that, while they were interested in legislation to protect the rights of religious objectors from forced unionism, they did not want consideration of such proposals to delay action on nullifying all state laws against forced union membership.

8. Members of the House who seek most vigorously to identify themselves as "liberals" opposed a House ruling for 14 (b) debate under which consideration could be given to the protection of civil liberties violated by compulsory unionism. Representative Edith Green (D-Ore.). who rarely deviated from 100 per cent support of union legislative objectives, was quoted as saying of her proposal for protecting religious objectors, "I am certain it would have passed the House if labor had allowed a vote."

The examples are endless. Political expediency makes strange bedfellows. However, the one fact of political life that cannot be overlooked is this: No matter how strong the political headlock which any group claims to have on government, it can be broken by an aroused public.

THE NEXT STEPS

The conclusion, let me speculate briefly on what we see for the future.

First. The drive for repeal will be renewed early in the next session. President Johnson and the union lobby have no choice. However, we believe the opposition to repeal will be even stronger and more enthusiastic. If the Administration forces a lengthy resumption of the "extended debate," it will further stimulate public opinion against repeal. The razor-thin edge which unions claim in the Senate on the repeal issue itself has already suffered marked attrition. Resumption of debate in the Senate next year could lead to a solid majority against repeal if and when the issue comes to a vote.

Second. The issue of Right To Work has now been permanently and properly dislodged from alignment with any "liberal" or "conservative" philosophy. It now stands on its own feet. Whereas, in the past, opposition to Right To Work was too often considered part of the package position of doctrinaire "liberals," the experience of the past year has disclosed so many inconsistencies in that position that more and more classic liberals are lining up on the side of voluntarism in union membership.

Third. The public debate over 14 (b) and defeat of repeal will set the stage for numerous new state drives for Right To Work laws.

Fourth. We have moved much nearer the day when serious consideration will be given to a national ban on compulsory unionism. Such a law will give substance to the present hypocritical statement of intent in Taft-Hartley which says: "Employees shall have the right to self organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the right to refrain from any or all such activities EXCEPT. . ."

We believe the people of the nation will soon demand the removal of that exception which negates all employee rights under the heel of compulsory unionism.

(THE END)

Drew Pearson Special

DREW PEARSON SAYS: Venezuela builds world's largest power dam; American contractors run into snags; Snafu could sour U.S.-Venezuelan relations.

GURI, VENEZUELA -- About 800 miles from the equator in an area where jaguars and monkeys once roamed, American contractors are building what may be the world's largest power dam.

It should surpass the giant Krasnoyarsk dam in Siberia and will be larger than the present Grand Coulee dam in Washington State, though the interior department has just announced plans to increase Grand Coulee.

Generating six million kilowatts when all three phases of the dam are finished, Guri will supply cheap power as far away as Brazil, Trinidad and Colombia. More important, it will supply power to the City of Caracas and to the steel and aluminum mills developing in Guayana, an area being established as the Ruhr of Venezuela.

This is where U. S. Steel has located a mountain of pure iron ore and sends seagoing ore boats daily down the Orinoco to its Newton, Pa., mill on the banks of the Delaware; and where Bethlehem Steel also loads ore boats to sail up Chesapeak Bay to its plan at Sparrows Point, Md.

It's a Pan American economic complex almost as important as the Pan American Union.

This area is also where the Venezuelan government has located its state-owned steel mill, has gone into partnership with Reynolds metals in building an aluminum plant.

Guayana is as large as Italy, but has a population of less than a million against Italy's 58 million.

When all three stages of the Guri Dam are finished, it will have three times the power of the Aswan Dam. Having gone to Egypt for the dedication of Aswan, I went to the Interior of Venezuela to look at Guri.

The Caroni River on which it is located has the power of the Niagara River -- smaller but just as beautiful. It rushes and gushes, falls and froths through the jungle in a series of mighty cascades. No man, you think as you watch its power and beauty, could ever harness that torrent.

But a huge concrete wall, towering 300 feet from the river bed, is ready to do just that. When completed, and when this water is turned against that concrete wall, it will back up to form a lake covering almost 700,000 acres.

It's an international project, with Westinghouse supplying the generators, Krupp supplying the Spillway Gates, Ansaldo of Italy the Intake Gates, Alshom of France the Transformers; Itachi of Japan the Turbines, Nippon Crane supplying the Cranes, and ASEA of Sweden supplying the Switch Gear.

UNEXPECTED COSTS

The funds, originally estimated at $81 million, have been put up by the World Bank, and the consortium which is doing the work is composed of Kaiser engineers, 37 per cent; Macco International of California, 24 per cent; Tecon International of Dallas, 19 per cent; Merritt-Chapman and Scott Overseas of New York, 10 per cent, with Compania Anonima De Construcciones, a Venezuelan firm, and Christiani and Nielsen, a Danish firm, carrying the balance.

However, the project has run into a series of obstacles. Chief problem has been borings to sample the rock foundation of the dam. These were undertaken by the Harza Engineering Company of Chicago on behalf of both the World Bank and Venezuela and they showed hard, not soft, rock. However, the contractors have discovered a soft rock foundation which has required them to excavate 30 feet deeper than expected, a time-consuming and expensive process.

Three thousand men were repeatedly kept idle while borings were inspected, the facts sent to Caracas for a decision, then the work shifted. As a result costs rose to a point that the smaller Danish partner in the Consortium went bankrupt, and has offered to sell its $1,500,000 assets to Kaiser for one dollar.

Total loss on the contract has now run into $46 million over and above the $181 million contract price. Edgar Kaiser is reported selling personal assets in his companies to meet the payroll.

The consortium has appealed to the Venezuelan government for relief on the ground that it and its engineers, not the contractors, were responsible for the originaly faulty borings.

The matter was referred to a committee of experts by a Venezuelan court, and the experts have concluded: "During the excavations and explorations subsequent to the bidding, it was determined that the rock conditions of the subsurface were not in all cases the same as those indicated in the bid documents and in several occasions it was necessary to deepen the excavations in order to reach the required conditions for the foundations of the project's works."

The three experts, Jesus A. Yanes, Frank A. Nickell and Victor M. Lopez, also found that "as a result of having performed a much larger excavation than the one anticipated in the contract documents, normally a longer period of time to execute the job is required."

However, they said nothing about additional costs, and the additional cost has run into such high figures that a decision is expected this month as to whether more money will be forthcoming or the American firms be relieved of their contract.

The decision is now before Gen. Rafael Alfonzo-Rafard, a graduate of Massachusetts Tech, and head of the CVG Authority.

Both sides appear to be sincere, scrupulously honest, and are trying to iron out their differences without recrimination. Some criticism has been made that Kaiser, who was in charge of the work, changed the project manager four times and that this caused delays. On the other hand, there have been language difficultues, and the problem of keeping men in isolated work camps for almost three years.

The situation is serious both as to reglations between the United States and Venezuela, hitherto excellent, and the future economy of the country. The city of Caracas is scheduled to change the cycle of its electric power in September, based on its receipt of power from the Guri Dam. The power lines have been constructed. Everything is ready to make the change -- except that the dam has not been completed. And the contractors, already $46 million in the red, indicate they may not be able to proceed unless they get financial help to meet their deficit and their almost $1 million monthly payroll.

Soybean Day Set Jan. 31

PORTAGEVILLE -- The soybean, Missouri's leading cash crop and the No. 1 crop in the Bootheel in 1966, will be in the spotlight Jan. 31 at the University of Missouri Delta Center.

This is Soybean Day for growers, processors, buyers and anyone else interested in soybeans.

The meeting is sponsored by the Missouri Soybean association in cooperation with the University of Missouri. Norman Brown, superintendent of the Delta Center will start off the program at 9:30 a.m. when he welcomes guests.

Aline Avery of New Madrid, president of the Missouri Soybean association, will preside.

Avery will appear on the program to tell how his organization has contributed to the expansion of soybeans -- a 200 million bushel crop at the end of World War II to nearly a billion bushel crop in the United States in 1966.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist, will serve as moderator of a panel who will discuss improved production practices based on research programs conducted at the Delta Center. First on the panel will be Dr. Leo Duclos, research geneticist in field crops, who will discuss "Soybean Breeding and New Varieties," followed by John Garrett, area soils agent, whose topic will be "Soybean Response to Fertilizer in Southeast Missouri." "Soybean Weed Control" will be presented by Donald Lloyd, weed control technician at the Delta Center, and E. B. Nace, area farm management agent, will wind up the morning program with "Irrigation and Double Cropping of Soybeans."

Lunch will be served at noon. Representatives of chemical companies will appear on the afternoon program to present and broadleaf weeds in soybeans. W. J. James, area agriculture agent of Pemiscot and Dunklin Counties, will be panel moderator.

Soybean growers will have an opportunity to ask questions concerning the use of herbicides and other soybean production methods. Soybean growers are expected from Butler, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Pemiscot, Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott and Stoddard Counties.

Dairymen Eye Stability in Milk Prices

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dairymen in the Midwest and Southwest want to see greater stability in producer and consumer prices of bottling milk.

Under federal milk marketing orders, minimum producer prices as established to assure consumers adequate supplies and producer adequate returns. But both producer and retail prices fluctuate during the year in relation to ups and downs in milk production.

Dairymen supplying 32 federal milk marketing order areas in Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin will present arguments for elimination of the seasonal changes in prices at an Agriculture Department hearing in Kansas City Jan. 26.

Under the pricing systems, producer prices tend to go down during the spring and early summer season of flush production and to go up during fall and winter seasons of lower production.

These changes in producer prices often make it necessary for retail prices to be changed.

What the dairymen would like to see is a price system that would give producers a uniform price through the year which would reflect the current seasonal reductions and advances in producer prices.

In 1966 for example, producer prices for Class I fluid or bottling milk in 165 American milk markets ranged from an average of $5.60 to $6.19 a hundred pounds. This was a variation equivalent to a little more than a cent a quart in the wholesale price. Retail prices for home-delivered milk ranged from an average of 28.9 to 31 cents a quart during 1966.

Soil and Plant Course Offered

A soils and plant nutrition short course will be taught at the high school during January and February.

The course will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each Thursday for five weeks. The instructor will be John D. Garrett, extension area soils specialist. E. B. Nace, farm management, will conduct one session. Both are from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville.

An outline of the short course:

7:30 p.m. Thursday -- Physical and chemical properties of soils, with a discussion of exchange capacity.

Feb. 2 -- Organic matter, soil phosprous and hydrogen.

Feb. 9 -- Limestone, nitrogen and nitrogen fertilizers.

Feb. 16 -- Soil and fertilizer -- phosphorus and potassium, economies of lime and fertilizer use.

Feb. 23 -- Micro-nutrients and soil testing film -- summary and questions.

Course brochures and enrollment forms may be obtained from the University Extension Centers in Benton, Bloomfield, Charleston and New Madrid.

Farm Management Trio Departs

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- A three-man farm management team left Thursday for Bhubaneswar, India, where the members will spend two years on a program to increase food grain production.

Heading the group, which is sponsored by the University of Missouri, is J. Parker Rodgers, who was Boone County extension director until November 1, 1965 when he took a leave of absence.

With him are John Falloon, leader of the university extension soils project since 1952, and William E. Yates, Macon, who has been Macon County extension agent since 1952.

They will be joined Feb. 1 by Frank D. Miller, Chillicothe, who has been Livingston County extension director since 1947.

With them on the two-year stay will be their families.

They will take part in the Agricultural Production Promotion Program to increase food production in the Indian state of Orissa.

In my book about my White House years, I must mention my good friend Dean Rusk. I know he'll get a kick out of it.

Owner Says Blarney Stone Not for Sale or for Hire

By EDDY GILMORE

BLARNEY, Ireland (AP) — "Neither the Blarney Stone nor any part of it is going to America or to any other place," said its owner. "But the people do still try to buy it."

Who tries to buy it?

"Americans mostly," replied Mary Penelope Hillyard, who inherited ancient Blarney Castle and its world-famous stone in 1952.

Americans?

"Oh, yes. Someone is always walking up here to the new castle and trying to buy it. When they find they can't get it, then they try to settle by buying our dog Kelly, or one like him."

Kelly is a tremendous Irish wolfhound who looks almost as Irish as the stone which is supposed to give those who kiss it the gift of gab. For at least 50 years, Americans have been trying to buy the stone, or chunks of it.

In 1949, John P. Hewlitt, who was born in Atlanta, Ga., actually announced he had negotiated to have it flown to the United States and taken on a nationwide tour, with proceeds going to charity.

But Sir George Colhurst, the the owner, said there had been a misunderstanding and the stone would never leave the castle for the United States or elsewhere, "because I doubt if I'd ever get it back."

After that Sir George wrote in his will: "It is my desire that as far as I can prevent it, the said stone, or any part of it, shall never be sold or removed from the old castle at Blarney."

The Blarney Stone is at old Blarney Castle. Mrs. Hillyard and her husband, Maj. Jack Hillyard, a retired British army officer, live at new Blarney Castle, a gray stone building about 100 years old and a quarter - mile from the old castle.

The Blarney Stone is one of the world's best known objects. People come by the thousands to kiss it, which is something of a gymnastic trick.

In 1805, a book "Stranger in Ireland," carried this note:

"About four miles before we reached Cork on our left, my fair companion du voyage pointed out Blarney Castle with its turret. It is recorded that there is a stone there very nearly inaccessible which it is stated possesses the rare virtue of making those very happy who touch it."

In those days kissing the Blarney Stone was dangerous, for the would-be kisser had to be suspended head downward from the battlements, with a strong man holding his ankles — in order to get his lips on the stone. Should the holder let go, the fall is about 125 feet.

After a man was killed at the old castle, kissing the stone was made easier — and safer.

Two vertical bars now extend inside the battlements, straight down to the stone. By sitting down and leaning backwards, while holding to the vertical bars, a fairly agile person can easily plant his lips on the stone.

"I've done it many times with no one holding me," said Mrs. Hillyard "It's not hard.

The best offer the owner has ever received for the Blarney Stone-4-foot by 1-inch long, by 1-foot 1-inch wide, and 9-inches thick — is $280,000.

"A lot of money," she said, "but still — no sale."

In 1949 a medical officer, Dr. L. C. Geiger from San Francisco, took one look at the Blarney Stone and was reported as commenting: "It's unhygienic. Over the centuries germs must have been planted on it in layers."

The owner pooh-poohs this suggestion.

"It's regularly cleaned," she said, "but even if it wasn't, just look at the rain."

Where did the Blarney Stone come from? The legends are numerous. One is that it was Jacob's pillow and was brought to Ireland during one of the Crusades.

Another is that the stone came from part of a Druids circle near the castle.

A considerably believed theory is that the stone came from Scotland as a gift from Robert the Bruce. After the Battle of Bannockburn, in grateful appreciation of Irish aid, the great Bruce sent the Blarney Stone and it was stuck on the battlement.

Now Gals Wear the Shirts

By HELEN HENNESSY
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Apart from the big noise over miniskirts there's a shirt making big news in Paris right now. It's a lady's shirt, tailored with traditional men's button-down collar and it's being worn by all the French gals who originate so much of the sportswear fashion news.

The poor boy sweater was their most recent export of note to the American scene and all we have to do is count how many we see here now to realize how important such a trend can become. If we follow the direction indicated at this moment shirts may well be the poor boys' successors.

In thinking of shirts we tend to visualize men's classics. Yet there's a whole new realm of shirt design developing. Imaginatively designed women's shirts, not to be confused with blouses, are being made by several traditional men's shirtmakers. Quality is essential and fabric excellence a prime factor. Many of the finest new shirts are in fabrics containing Avril rayon.

Avril rayon is absorbent, which spells comfort for the wearer, yet it offers all the desirable easy-care qualities of synthetic fibers.

ONE CHIC NEW WAY TO WEAR a pantsuit is with a precisely tailored shirt massed with deep red, gold and white flowers. Lady Arrow's choice (left) is a blend of Avril rayon and cotton in durable press. Avril rayon and polyster are blended in the striped fabric (right) in earth brown and white. A granddad style but by Gant Shirtmakers, this shirt shows its Victorian heritage with proper white collar and cuffs.

Shirtmakers who have been catering to the demanding tastes of quality-conscious men for years bring excellent experience to women's wear. They know that a good shirt can be the staple of a wardrobe and that it will receive lots of wear and laundering. In addition to their fine workmanship, they now give us fashion news as well as quality in the fabrics they choose for women's shirts. There are crinkle textures, for example, all manner of thick and thin stripes, plus floral prints in splurges of intense color.

WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME?

It echoes in our hearts, Christ's anguished cry,
Piercing to the depths, as in that hour
It battered a bleak, unrelenting sky
And left the Saviour bound in mortal power.
For have we not, in lesser measure, known
The terror of the orphaned, understood
How pain can rasp the soul? We've felt our own
Forsakenness in grief, shared doubts that good
Might come of such sore tests, Yet when storms beat
Against us, in rebellion we have railed
As if it were some undeserving mete
And we, the chosen, must not be assailed,
Forgetting how God works His miracle
On trusting souls, surrendered to His will.

Stock Market Rise Puzzling to Cynics

by JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The upward thrust of the 1967 stock market, following sharply an 11-month decline, is surprising some cynics who feel that the new mood is superficial-motivated merely by the flipping of a calendar page.

January traditionally has been a month of increases, a time when traders reinvest their yearend dividends or bonuses -- or cash from tax-loss selling.

This year the gloomy sellers of late December have become the hopeful buyers of early January, doing an about-face in perfect step with the calendar.

The prices of stocks fell on average in 10 of the 12 months of 1966. Now, since the turn of the year, almost every day has produced increases in values, sometimes accompanied by very heavy trading.

There is no assurance, of course, that this will continue. Some large investment advisers are, in fact, encouraging subscribers to increase their reserves, to bide their time and watch and wait.

There are some factors in the latest advance that are easy to understand. Since there was a real plunge in stock prices last year there was much selling in December to establish losses for deduction on 1966 income tax payments. Some of this money is now returning to the market.

In addition, a lot of bears came out of the woods in that month. Short interest rose to a record high of 14.6 million shares Dec. 15. In the month since then it has dropped back to 12.5 million shares.

Some analysts have felt for weeks now that some stocks are bargains by any reckoning. Among these stocks are widely held blue chips that were knocked down in 1966 because of peculiar, special factors.

Credit is loosening again. Money is expected to be more freely lent after almost strangling some areas of business last year. This could offset some negative pressure if the proposed 6 per cent surcharge is added to income taxes later this year.

The Vietnam war psychology also has been mentioned as changing subtly, with a successful resolution of the war not a distant hope.

Some of the uncertainty about President Johnson's economic stance also has been clarified. The President, after long months of apparent indecision, has asked for the surcharge on income taxes. The erosion of business confidence in the administration that occurred during much of 1966 seems to have been left behind. Perhaps it has reached its low, perhaps it has risen, perhaps business is wearying of talking about it.

With these and other factors discounted, the pressures to remain out of the market must have lessened. Some big blocks of stock now indicate institutions are among the buyers.

GAME UNCOVERS TOTS' HEARING PROBLEMS

Pictures of an airplane, a cowboy, a fire truck, a wristwatch, and other familiar objects have proven useful in uncovering hearing problems of preschool children. According to the Minnesota State Medical Society, 10 percent of almost 30,000 youngsters whose hearing was tested by the new technique, were referred for further medical examination to check possible hearing disorders.

Usually, children with mild hearing loss are not recognized until they are in second or third grade, Terry S. Griffing, the Mayo Clinic audiologist who devised the new test pointed out at a recent meeting here of eye and ear specialists. By that time considerable damage might have been done a child's self-confidence, he said. This test increases the chances of picking up hearing problems earlier.

This is how it works: A preschooler fitted with ear phones listens as a tape recorded voice asks him to point out one or another of the 12 pictures of familiar objects in front of him. The instructions are given at various sound levels, including that of normal speech. Failure to hear a certain number of words at the lower-decibel range is an indication of possible hearing loss. The roar of a lion, a low-decibel sound, and the chirp of a bird, a high-decibel sound, are also included in the test.

MANY PATIENTS IGNORE DOCTORS' ORDERS

"Communication between doctor and patient ideally necessitates a certain degree of reciprocity." And as in other areas, however, the ideal and real are quite far apart. According to a study presented at a meeting here of the American Public Health Association, a whopping 37 percent of patients disregarded what their doctors advised. Why? Because patients and doctors are people, and what happens between them affects the extent to which a patient will cooperate.

According to Milton S. Davis, Ph.D., assistant professor of Sociology in Medicine at the Cornell University Medical College, when a patient is authoritative and a doctor permissive, the former is apt to ignore the latter's recommendations. He is likely to do the same if the doctor seems antagonistic. Uncooperative behavior may also result when there is "non-reciprocal informativeness," that is, when a doctor collects information from a patient but fails to feed back any. If tensions between the physician and patient build up and these are not explored and released, the patient may respond by failing to comply with orders.

Neither age, sex, education, marital status, religion, or occupation seemed to affect compliance or non-compliance.

SUGGEST A CAUSE FOR URINARY AILMENT

About one of every 10 women who suffer from urinary frequency have no urologic disease. Their distressing symptom may, rather, be related to sexual problems and other psychological upsets.

This is the finding reported by Dr. Donald R. Smith to a recent American Medical Association meeting here. In addition to various drugs that might offer relief, Dr. Smith recommended psychotherapy to get at the basic cause of the problem. The physician is chairman of the Division of urology at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco.

HIDDEN SCARS

Fire had come to these woods one day
dead in places, too --
with their limbs hanging like the broken wind of a bird.
But they came out of it somehow--
out of the fire, I mean --
and five years, ten years, perhaps, one would never know of the hidden
scars. . .
Unless other fires came.

Lisa Hughes Returns to World Turns

NEW YORK (AP) — For daytime television viewers this was the week when Lisa Hughes came back to "As The World Turns."

"As The World Turns," it should be explained, is a daytime serial, or soap opera, on CBS that has been a favorite for so many years it probably should start dropping five years from its age. It moves inexorably from emotional crisis to crisis and is sneered at by people unable to watch television regularly during the daylight hours.

For the faithful fans, the return of Lisa Hughes was pretty exciting, for she had been a sort of antiheroine of the show for six years. In May, 1965, on the heels of the success of "Peyton Place," CBS decided to spin a nighttime soap opera off the popular daytime series. So one day Lisa Hughes, played by attractive Eileen Fulton, boarded a Chicago-bound train in Oakdale, scene of "As The World Turns." That night a new program, "Another World" had its premiere and was built around Lisa's new life in the big city.

As it turned out, "Another World" never made the ratings grade and quietly disappeared with the new season in September. Lisa returned briefly to Oakdale and daytime TV long enough to wrap up some loose ends and then was returned to Chicago, a second husband and oblivion — until last Monday.

Miss Fulon, who had majored in music and voice in college, was busily launching a night-club carer.

"But now I'm back in Oakdale," she reported. "People who came to see me as Eileen Fulton were marvelous but they also made me realize how important Lisa Hughes has been to me. I just don't want to lose those people.

"The audience seems to despise Lisa but love her at the same time. She has spunk and ambition, but she's — well, she's devious and does awful things that cause trouble."

Every time government goes into business in competition with private enterprise, it has to have special privileges in order to compete.

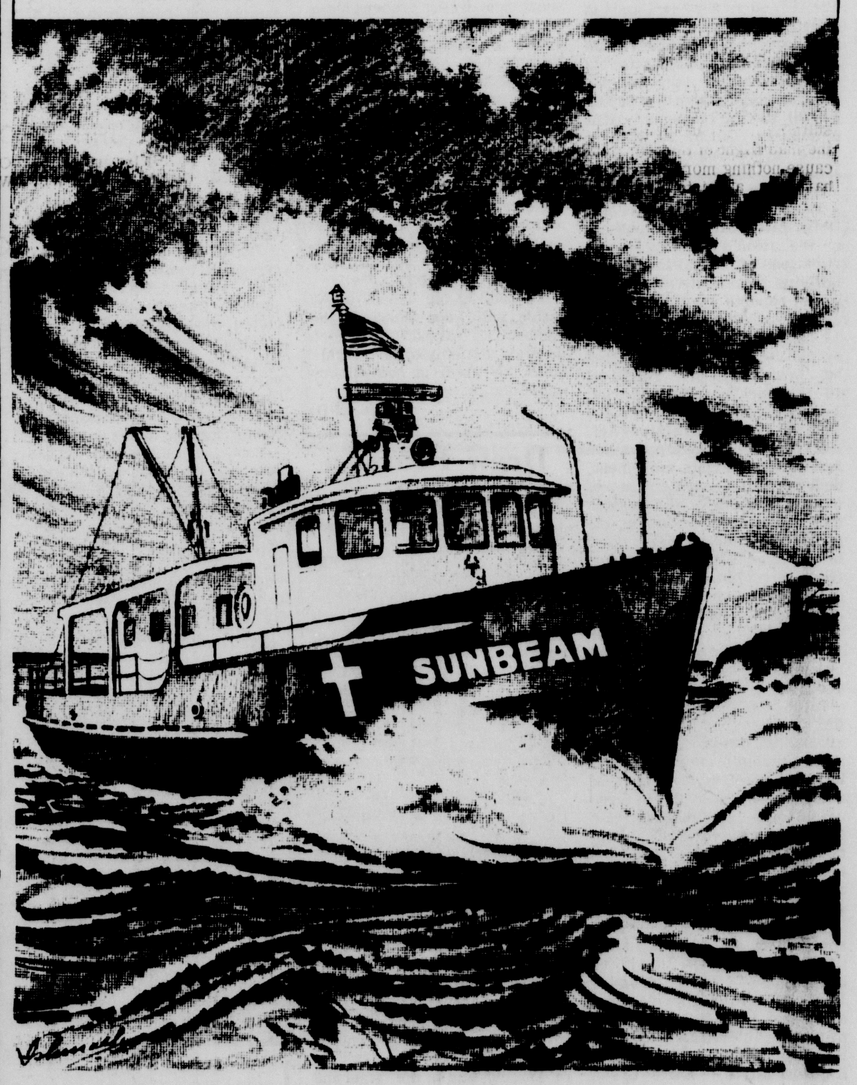
The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL



To isolated communities and families along the coast and on the islands of the state of Maine, the boat Sunbeam III is a symbol of Christian hope, help and brotherhood. It is the working arm of The Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society. In all kinds of weather it carries the tangibles and intangibles of Christian service. The mission ministers make hundreds of parish calls, hold services and give special attention to the aged and ill. At Christmas the Sunbeam delivers 1,500 gifts to lonely villages and lighthouses.

The Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society has grown and flourished since 1905 because of the faith of many people across the country.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, one time president of the board of the Society, wrote a poem titled "Little Ship Sunbeam." He read it at the launching of Sunbeam II in 1926. The last stanza could well be the watchword for the Society.

Then let the wind blow high or low,
Serene and brave our boat shall go,
For Jesus sails the sea again,
Along the granite coast of Maine.

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

BUMBLEBEE FIGHTS

When I was a boy, one of the chief sports was fighting bumblebees. From the ease with which we found nests, bumblebees must have been more plentiful then than now. The sport, I believe, is a thing of the past.

Two weapons were used after hostilities began. One was a paddle, for offense; and the other a bunch of iron weeds for defense. It was no time or place for sissies. Only boys who had stout hearts and willing hands, and who could stand some real punishment, were qualified for such sport.

A quick eye and a quicker hand were necessary, once the leader had plunged a stick into the nest and stirred the bumblebees up. The strategy was to smack the onrushing bees with the paddle, failing which the bunch of weeds was swept furiously back and forth across the face for protection. No battlefield could produce more excitement and activity than a bumblebee fight. Boys rated it the finest sport of all.

Until tractors eliminated horses from the scheme of things on the farm the bumblebees furnished no end of unsought excitement, especially during harvest season. The farmer would go forth to his wheat, oats or hay field with mind attuned to the beauties of Nature or to the profit and loss of the grain or hay he was about to lay down. The hum of the sickle became sweet, rhythmic music to his ears, and he soon was at peace with the world, even with neighbor boys who had raided his watermelon patch or the neighbor whose bull had smashed a panel of fence and let the herd into his corn. All of a sudden, however, the plodding team began to rear and kick, then would take off across the landscape at the last inch of its speed. A nest of bumblebees had been disturbed and every bee was having revenge on team and driver. Clouds of dust here and there on the horizon evidence similar incidents on other farms. Sometimes a driver would be thrown in front of his sickle, with tragic results to him. Usually, however, the mad flight of the team would cause nothing more than broken harness, a twisted piece of machinery or some wicked language from the man whose job was to help feed an unappreciative world. As matters now stand, bumblebees get nothing but disappointment from an attack on the metal monster with which modern harvesting is done.

WHEN CANDLES WERE USED

When I was a boy there was not an electric light in Missouri. Some Monroe County homes used small coal oil lamps. Others used candles.

The lamps had No. 1 wicks, meaning wicks about half an inch wide. They made very little light but were evidences of progress and prosperity which distinguished their owners from those who continued to use candles.

When I first learned to set type and feed a press in the Appeal office, we occasionally had to work at night. Always we worked by candlelight. At press or case we made the candle stand erect by first dropping some grease from the lighted end on the flat surface, then set the lower end of the candle in it. When the grease cooled the candle was firmly fixed.

On very special occasions during that era Paris would have an "illumination" as a feature of a celebration program. All the windows in the Courthouse, stores, offices and some of the homes would have rows of candles across them and at the appointed hour these candles would be lighted. Then, all the boys and half the men in town, many carrying torches, would march through Main street and several of the residence streets, with the town band leading the way. Such an illumination in these days of electricity would arouse nothing but ridicule and laughter. Back there it was brilliant and thrilling beyond description.

With the coming of the lamp the tallow candle was doomed. For a time only those in good circumstances had lamps. In due time, however, the impulse to keep up with the neighbors brought the lamp into just as general use as the same impulse brought the telephone, electric light, radio, electric refrigerator and automobile into general use.

A RACING EPIC

The Racing Epic of my boyhood days was between a great trotter owned by Jeff Bridgford and a ringer local sports imported from Jacksonville, Ill. The ringer arrived as part of a team that was pulling a mover wagon. Jim Worrell professed to buy him for use as motive power for his paint wagon.

In due time, one of the local sports provoked an argument with Church Bridgford, in the course of which he belittled the Bridgford trotter and offered to bet $500 that Jim Worrell's old paint wagon steed could beat him. The bet, of course, was promptly taken. Other local sports who were wise to the conspiracy, put up a good sum and, of course, a race was arranged. It was held on the Moberly tract, with thousands of spectators.

The Bridgford horse, sleek and eager, was quite a contrast to the paint wagon horse, which looked dejected and seemed to lack interest. When the go signal was given, however, the dejected paint wagon steed suddenly came to life and the Bridgford horse might as well have been tied to a post. What local sports had done was to import a gentle but swift horse from a professional stable for their nefarious plot.

CHEESE AND CRACKER ERA

When I was a boy the cheese and cracker business was a feature of every grocery store in towns and village. In places like Paris, Mo., which had a population of around 2000, there were no cafes, no restaurants, no establishments of any sort in which hungry people could get a noonday lunch. Unless willing to partronize a hotel, their only resource was the grocery store. The usual order was for a nickel's worth from a cheese that was two feet in diameter.

I doubt if any grocer of that era came out even on a cheese of that size, since most of it was sold on nickel orders and only a miracle man could have cut so small a slice from so large a cheese. Six or eight crackers were given with every order. The crackers were much larger than those now on the market. They came in large boxes. The barrel usually stood uncovered and in reach of loafers who did a lot of mooching.

In our printing office the work was done by my father and three of his sons, including myself. We had the cheese and cracker habit. Every morning at 10 o'clock the three boys would quit their type cases and join their bewhiskered father, all sinking to their knees on the floor. It was not a prayer session, however. It was to invoke the time-honored jeffing game, to decide who should buy a nickel's worth of cheese and crackers. This game was played with five m-quads from a 10-point case, each quad, like all other items in a font of type, having nicks on one side. Three throws were allowed to each contestant. The one who scored the most upturned nicks was high man. The man who scored the least was the loser. This game probably was the forerunner of craps, in that the player should roll the quads while on his knees and out of his hands.

#66 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area

His measure as a man depends on your measure as a parent!

How can you add to your measure? Going to worship is the simple act of faith that makes man and boy just a little taller.

In our complex and often trying world, faith offers its own answers to the problems that weigh on you. Next time you say to yourself, "But what can I do?" about the "unsolvable" difficulties of today, remember that peace in the world starts with peace in you.

Go to worship, take your family to church or synagogue with you, this week. Your faith reaffirms the sacredness of Man and Life. And a better world starts with this very idea!

Students Hurry Too Often: America Needs Relaxation

WHY IS EVERYONE IN A HURRY? The world is spinning 16,500 miles per hour and man is doing his level best to leave it behind. America, especially, is running itself to a frenzy.

This peculiar characteristic is evident in the high school, as can be noticed at lunchtime, when people run over, around, and into everybody else.

American's lives are puppets of time. An American cannot go anywhere or do anything casually--his life has to be regulated, divided, and segmented in a futile attempt to capture a little bit of eternity.

One stampedes to lunch to be "intime" to avoid waiting. One hurries to the lounge after eating to socialize for a minute or two, and then scurries off to class, to wait impatiently for the hour to end.

Finally the day is over, and everyone leaves school as quickly as possible or else frets in the lounge until transportation arrives. At home one waits, counting hours, for some special event; or maybe just a television show. People seem to burn up all their energy either going somewhere or waiting to get there.

Driving is probably the most graphic example of America's rush. How many lives are lost by someone burning his tires off to reach a stop sign? Why must people go fives miles over the limit instead of under?

The point is -- slow down! Relax! Don't be in such a regulated hurry to do everything. Stop and talk to someone you know instead of just tossing a brief greeting. If a tight schedule must be met, plan it out to allow a little extra time -- and don't spend that time worrying about what you might be doing.

Make a habit of being an easy-going, likeable person, instead of admiring someone else who is. Drive five miles under the speed limit for a while. Soon the world will seem a little more under your control; you CAN exist moving at half speed, and you have plenty of power in reserve.

Second Semester Begins; What Does Future Hold?

AS THE SECOND SEMESTER begins, realization of what the future holds is in all of the students' minds.

To seniors it is the final semester of their high school days. The future is filled with thoughts of college and careers. As graduation day draws nearer, seniors find it difficult to believe that this is finally THEIR graduation.

To juniors it means only one more semester left and then they will be able to claim the title of seniors. They will no longer have the dreaded name of "underclassmen."

Juniors have all the activities to look forward to that are now becoming memories to seniors, such as Red Peppers, football and basketball games, homecoming, student body elections, and many more events at Sikeston high.

To sophomores it just means that they have one less semester to worry about and that they have finally become acquainted with the customs and rules of Sikeston high school.

They are not discouraged, for they retain the thought that some day THEY will be the seniors and will get the satisfaction of being upperclassmen.

Seniors, remember, only 126 days until graduation; use them wisely and make plans for the future that is waiting for you.

Farris Ranks 'Outstanding' In Athletics

During the football season, Bruce backed up the senior quarterback Wayne Limbaugh. He scored 18 points in varsity play, and he was the starting quarterback on the "B" team.

He was also one of the very few sophomores to letter his first year in high school.

Bruce plays forward on both the "A" and "B" teams in basketball.

He also has a special interest in baseball. For the past few years he has been pitching in the Babe Ruth team, and he was chosen on the All-Star team last year.

Bruce pitched in the two tournaments participated in by the All-Star team in Sikeston and Poplar Bluff last summer. He was voted the most valuable player in each of the games.

Bruce plans to try out for pitcher on the baseball team at school in the spring. He hopes to try for third base on the Connie Mack team in Sikeston next summer.

Bruce is also a member of the student council, representing homeroom 10-C.

He is vice-president of the sophomore class.

Bruce hopes to attend the University of Missouri after he graduates from Sikeston high school.

New Courses Help Seniors Plan Future

Independent Study, Career Explorations Given This Semester

Independent study is designed to teach students how to manage time and to prepare them for college.

Each student is given two weeks to select a subject of interest to him on which a formal paper will be written.

Carl Wright is the coordinator of the course and will help students if they are confronted with problems concerning the course; -- otherwise, the student's time is his own to prepare his paper.

The paper will not receive a letter grade. It will be graded by a committee and rated as acceptable, non-acceptable, or excellent.

Students enrolled in independent study are Camille Bowman, Steve Spear, Becky Wagner, Toni Zaricor, and Teresa Hamelmann.

Kay Trigg, Patti McMullin, Charles Stamp, Ned Matthews, Skip Alsup, Larry Lancaster, Danny Spears, Roger Francis, Bill Lashmet, and George Bechtold.

Career explorations is being offered for the first time this semester. An enrollment of 37 students proves the definite interest taken by students in careers.

Self appraisal will be the first goal of students in career exploration. Each student will compare ability, aptitude, and interest with the career he plans to choose.

Professional occupations will be considered. Guest speakers are to speak to the class during the year about occupations.

Each student will then select a career of interest to him and will do individual research on this career.

Finally the students will learn how to find and apply for jobs in both small towns and big cities.

Independent study and career exploration are devised for seniors and their futures.

'Printing Week' Reminds World: January 15—21

International Printing Week has been observed during the past week in nations throughout the world. Tomorrow signifies the end of this week commemorating the invention of the printing press.

This past week has been celebrated to honor the graphic arts, printing house craftsmen, and the 259th birthday of Benjamin Franklin, who was instrumental in improving the art of printing.

People seldom stop to consider the "power of print," taking for granted each day the books they study. It is too often forgotten that but for the printing press only the wealthy would be able to obtain the books transcribed by hand in the monastaries.

Democracy, such as that known in the United States, can thrive only on an educated people, and without print the multitudes would not have the abundant opportunity for education.

As a news media, print cannot be overlooked. It is one of the most important factors in communicating the news to the populace.

Readers of today can quickly discover the facts they need to know by glancing at the headlines and decks specified to make the topic plain.

International Printing Week is set up in order to remind the people of the importance of print in extending their reservoiors of knowledge, and by so doing, furthering democracy in the United States. An informed people is a free people.

Bulldog Barker is printed by the journalists of Sikeston high school each week. These students strive to use various size of types to make an attractive layout.

Staffers are always on the alert for "news," and if anyone has a story or some items he would like to see "in print," please be sure to inform the journalists early in each week.

"Obesity is a condition which proves that the Lord does not help those who help themselves and help themselves and help themselves."

Camille Bowman, Judy Murchison, Stan McMackins, Greg Bailey, or Bill Marsh.

These staff members will receive payments before school, at noon, and after school each day.

Growler pages (approximately 50) were sent to the publisher in December, and another shipment will be made in February.

Final shipment of the yearbook must be made to the publisher by June 10. This will enable the annual to be a complete review of the year's activities.

Growlers will be distributed to the students about the middle of August -- this enables the seniors to receive the books before they leave for college in September.

Homemaking Class Offers Various Units Of Study

Mrs. Hemba Young and Mrs. Larry April instruct students in various courses of the homemaking department in Sikeston high school.

Topics offered each semester in high school are tailoring, child development, home nursing, home management, home decorating, family living, grooming, intermediate foods and clothing, and advanced foods and clothing.

Each of these units is designed with the purpose to further the knowledge of the students who will be applying these practices in further life.

Students in the tailoring class learn to design and construct wool garments.

Child development is a lecture course with some observation at nursery and kindergarten schools in Sikeston.

Home nursing students study a Red Cross textbook and have a session of 12 laboratory meetings, supervised by the practical nursing students enrolled in the Manpower-Development program of the Sikeston schools.

Semester unit in home management is a course where students study the management of money, time, energy, and personal ability.

Home decoration teaches the members how to coordinate color for all surfaces--furniture and interior of home.

Advanced foods instructs students to be creative in the use of easy-to-serve and packaged foods; know the food habits and customs of individuals of various cultural, racial, and religious backgrounds; and study health and safety practices with food in the home.

Household technology, directed by Mrs. April, offers instruction in job success, cleaning skills, laundry, home care of sick, and foods.

Roving Reporter Queries Students Of High School

David Boyer . . . "I like all the nice people who attend the school."

Phil Henley . . . "I think the coaches are pretty great."

David Entrekin . . . "Sikeston high school has an excellent scholastic program."

Dianne Alsup . . . "It's a great school and I hope it never changes."

Mary Jane Cope . . . "It's a wonderful school."

Debbie Ingram . . . "SHS has a great faculty."

Don Jones . . . "I like the different kinds of classes it offers."

Dave Matthews . . . "The school activities are a lot of fun."

Do You Know These Facts On Faculty?

This quiz was prepared to find out how well the students of SHS know their teachers. If you have really become well acquainted with your teachers, the following questions should be simple for you to answer.

Do you know . . .

1. Who played in the Golden Eagles Band and sang in the glee club for one year at Southeast Missouri State College?

Cheerleaders Name Three As 'Outstanding Peppers'

Joyce Vaught, Lynne Tenkhoff, and Mary Anne Sappenfield were chosen "outstanding Red Peppers" Friday night as Sikeston played Charleston at Anniston.

Cheerleaders named these three girls as "outstanding Red Peppers" because of their enthusiastic cheering throughout the entire game.

Sikeston won the "B" game, but lost the "A" game by three points.

Attendance by the Red Peppers at the game was described as good, and the girls are to be complimented on their desire to display school spirit.

Bulldogs will face the Malden Green Waves at the Sikeston Armory tonight. Red Peppers are urged to be in their seats by 7 p.m.

"B" game begins at 7, and the "A" team faces the opponents at approximately 8:30.

One girl from each of the three classes is usually selected for the "outstanding" honor at each basketball game.

SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE

A six-year-old boy was watching in fascination a larger-than-average woman weighing herself. But the scales were out of order and the indicator stopped at 75 pounds.

"What do you know!" the little boy marveled. "She's hollow!"

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

As you have many members in one physical body and those members differ in their functions, so we, though many in number, compose one body in Christ and all all members of one another. (Romans 12: 4-5, Phillips)

PRAYER: O God, from whom alone the fullness of life proceeds, grant that Thy church may not glory in wealth or numbers. May it glory rather because Christ is in its midst to offer through its ministries compassion and the peace that passes understanding; to Thine honor and glory. . . . . Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Chicago cab driver and, believe me, hacking in Chicago is a tough way to make a buck. But the worst part of the job isn't the driving, it's the people who get into the cab and right away they want to tell you their troubles.

Yesterday I had a lady who was going to the airport. She started to tell me a long story about her husband running around with a girl who works in his office. She got so worked up that she hit me on the back with her purse and hollered, "How do you like that for an old goat with grandchildren?"

Finally I said, "Look, Mrs., why don't you write to Ann Landers and let me drive this cab?"

She yelled, "I DID write to Ann Landers and she told me I need to talk to somebody about my problem so I am talking to you."

Now I know you don't mean for people to tell their troubles to cab drivers. What you mean is they should talk to ministers or marriage counselors and like that. So please, Ann Landers, make it clear to the folks who write you. Much obliged - BIG RED

Dear Red: People who tell their troubles to cab drivers don't want advice. They just want somebody to listen.

A cab driver can be the ideal person to unload on because he's a stranger, he couldn't care less about who is to blame, and the passenger will probably never see him again. So, be a good egg and listen.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I will be celebrating our 20th wedding anniversary next month. The problem is that he wants to buy me a mink coat for my anniversary and I don't want one. I am going through the change and what I need most of the time is a fan, not a fur coat.

My husband says I am being selfish. He claims that I am depriving him of one of the greatest pleasures a man can have - presenting his wife with something. If you say he is right, I will consider it. May I hear from you please? -- SHAKER HEIGHTS

Dear Shaker Heights: I urge you to reconsider. Forget about yourself. Make the sacrifice. Put your husband's wishes first. Think Mink. You'll be glad you let him talk you into it.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think about a grown man who has a faithful wife (not beautiful, just average looking) and two adorable children, yet the only picture he carries in his billfold is one of his mother and father?

Some men have pictures of the wife and children on their desks, but we don't even rate a billfold. This may sound like a petty complaint but it hurt me deeply when I opened my husband's shirt drawer yesterday and discovered the new pictures I had made up for the wallet. This morning I checked and found that he is still carrying the old picutre of his parents.

Dear Left Out: I'll bet your husband has been carrying that old picture of his parents for many years - and I hope you'll remain silent and let him do it as long as he wants to. The fact that he doesn't carry your picture doesn't mean he cares less for you and the children. It simply means he feels guilty about making the change and he just can't bring himself to do it.

Almanac For 1967 Now Ready

"American farmers in today's world agriculture" is the timely farming theme highlighted in the 1967 Ford Almanac, just off the press.

In addition to its special appeal to agricultural interests, however, this new Ford year book offers dozens of new ideas and helpful tips to city and suburban readers, as well as rural residents.

The 1967 Ford Almanac is the 14th consecutive edition produced by the noted farm writer, John Strohm, and his staff. It covers everything from hints for part-time gardeners to farm management ideas for efficient commercial farmers.

Here are some highlights from the 1967 Alamanac:

1967 AGRICULTURAL THEME: Future needs for major crop and livestock products, together with dozens of new ideas farmers are using to meet these demands. Strohm and his staff visited with hundreds of farm specialists and top farmers across the country to develop the crop, livestock and mechanization sections.

YOUTH SECTION: Young people's guide to the future--how smart you will have to be . . . new jobs available. . .what you will earn and how you will live. . .new crop and livestock ideas you'll soon be using. . . machines of tomorrow.

OUTDOOR LIVING: Vest pocket gardens for city folks . . .easy formula for fine roses . . .grass you never mow. . . great ways to have fun near and far from home. . . pretty homes around the world. . .new garden wonders to try. . . unsung wildlife heroes of the farm.

HOME AND FAMILY: Why you need family goals... Kitchen brighteners for Mom . . .Organized storage hints . . .New foods you should know about. . .How to choose your clothing type. . .Washing and ironing tips for synthetic fibers. . .Do-it-yourself home repair guide. . .Handy hobby displays. . .10 rules for happiness.

1967 FORD ALMANAC FARM EFFICIENCY AWARD: Features 14 of America's most outstanding farmers and their achievements.

LONG RANGE WEATHER FORECASTS: Country-wide forecasts for the holidays and special days, plus seasonal temperature and precipitation forecasts for the United States. Also first and last frost predictions.

WHAT'S NEW IN CROPS AND LIVESTOCK: Reports on the dairy barn of tomorrow. . .How to get an extra pig per litter. . .Beef cost cutters. . .New high protein corn. . .Prescription weed control. . .How to trim boll weevil losses. . .Frost-proof fruit trees. . .Minimum tillage for wheat.

In Ford Almanac tradition, the 1967 edition is liberally sprinkled with humor as well as intriguing facts. . . good reading all year long, as well as a valuable reference book in any season.

Distribution of the 1967 Ford Alamanac, as usual, is largely through dealers who sell Ford-built cars, trucks, tractors and implements.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strauss LL.B

THE CASE OF THE DISAPPOINTING VETERAN

Bill was a genius in his field. While he may not have been as smart as the guy who invented money, he certainly was on par with the guy who thought up interest. Consequently, after he signed a two-year contract to work for Mr. Smith, Mr. Smith's disappointment was readily understandable when Bill enlisted in the Army. Three years later, however, he was all smiles when Bill received his discharge. Anticipating that Bill would return and fulfill his two-year contract, Mr. Smith prepared a hearty welcome for him only to find out that Bill had other plans.

"Since my contract with you expired while I was in service," Bill explained, "I've decided to take a better job. If I don't seize opportunity when it comes, I'll have to chase it later."

"That's ridiculous," protested Mr. Smith. "You can't turn your back on me. We have an unfulfilled two-year contract. Your going into the Army didn't void it. I'm still entitled to your services for the two years you were unavailable."

Bill disagreed and the dispute had to be resolved in court.

If you were the judge, would you require veteran Bill to fulfill his unfulfilled contract?

THIS IS HOW THE JUDGE RULED: No. He held that being in military service is a valid excuse for not performing a contractual obligation; that since Bill's contract had expired, and it contained no provision extending it beyond the expiration date, he was no longer required to work for Mr. Smith.

(Based upon a 1946 California District Court of Appeals Decision)

Pfc. Smith Stationed In Germany

PFC. HENRY J. SMITH, JR., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Henry J. Smith, route one, is stationed with the headquarters company in the army personnel department in Pirmasims, Germany.

Smith is a 1964 graduate of Sikeston high school and completed his basic training at Fort Leonard Wood July 1, 1966.

He graduated from a 16-weeks steno school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Md.

After taking over a new territory, one of our salesmen came upon a prospective customer who proved to be a real challenge. Entering the lobby for the first time he found no receptionist, only a telephone which connected him directly to the purchasing agent upstairs. No matter what pitch our salesman used he could not get anyone to come downstairs to see him.

Finally, one afternoon he came back to our office all smiles, and explained he had finally managed to meet the purchasing agent.

Asked how he accomplished this, he answered, "I just telephoned upstairs, and said, 'Your lobby is on fire!'"

Dirksen, Ford Give GOP Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Appraising the state of a "vexed and troubled" union, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has prescribed reinforced U.S. determination and "a more vigorous effort on land, sea and in the air" to end the war in Vietnam.

And House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford has vowed Republican opposition to a wartime tax increase until President Johnson makes "a convincing case" for the boost he seeks.

The two minority leaders delivered their joint appraisal Thursday night before some 250 Republican colleagues in the Capitol's hot, crowded old Supreme Court chamber.

Ford said November's election victories gave the GOP a mandate to chart "a new direction for America. "As we look ahead, Republicans see a program of sensible solutions for the seventies," he said.

"Why don't we come up with some positive solutions for the sixties?" Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield asked later.

Another Democrat was more caustic in his assessment of the appraisal.

"I gather that Messrs. Dirksen and Ford are strongly in support of the Vietnam war, but strongly opposed to paying for it," said Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn. "This would have those who are fighting and dying make the only sacrifice."

But there were only Republicans to cheer, no Democrats to chide, when Dirksen and Ford delivered the twin speeches they said were neither replies nor rebuttals to the State of the Union message Johnson took to Congress 10 days ago.

Dirksen and some of his Republican colleagues were on the White House guest list for a buffet and reception a few hours before the speech.

The Republicans show was produced with a minute-by-minute timetable, designed for live, network television. There was none, although the speeches were filmed and recorded for later showing. Two radio networks — NBC and Mutual — broadcast the speeches.

Ford spliced into his speech a call for legislation "requiring television and radio to provide free and equal treatment to major parties and their spokesmen" between, as well as during, political campaigns.

Dirksen said Johnson spent 70 minutes on the air. "Tonight, we have but 27 minutes. That's not quite equal time," he said.

nothing in the New Madrid county conference race as Matthews has got it sewn up and if it hasn't already they will after tonight as the Parma Pirates, who are 2-1 in the conference, play there tonight...Gideon is in a rebounding year as is Portageville...We think the Gideon quintet has the poise and experience to win this conference contest. Gideon 46, Portageville 43.

Morehouse at Risco - After suffering such a defeat Tuesday at Howardville the Tigers will have the advantage although they are not playing on their home court...they are playing Risco... Morehouse 166, Risco 100. How does that suit you , their Miss C---Ber.

Dexter at Caruthersville - The Bearcats...who almost knocked off the high flying Bloomfield Wildcats earlier this week will have a field night at Caruthersville. Dexter 98, Caruthersville 67.

Charleston at Cape Central - Cape and Charleston both have been playing good ball lately - but we think the Blue Jays have been playing better and will have little trouble with the Tigers. Charleston 68, Cape 63.

Howardville at Lilbourn - What a rival contest this game is going to be...Both schools being about a half mile apart and wanting to be the other every chance they get...set the stage for this New Madrid county conference game...Lilbourn has the home court advantage but the Hawks have the height and shooting advantage...We just don't know which way to turn... so we...see Howardville...after a long through thought. Howardville 35, Lilbourn 23.

That's it.....

For 1966, the actual expenditures in each of these categories were as follows: salaries fees and office expenses $16,033.97; circuit court administration $5,368.68; election costs $11,725.38; public welfare and health services $26,928.70; and contingent expenses and obligations $44,-616.87.

Most budget items are purposely set somewhat higher than the actual anticipated expenditures, Goodin said, since the budget, once approved, becomes the statutory limit on expenditures.

For 1967, the "other expenses" category includes the following items: extension council $12,201; social security; county part, $4,500; insurance and bonds $3,000; publication costs $2,700; inquest cost bills $500; local registrars $300; operation and care of county buildings and grounds, $21,100; civil defense $5,082; Oak Grove cemetery $3,500; and emergency fund $10,000.

The buildings and grounds budget item includes $10,800 for repairs to buildings, which compares with 1966 actual expenditures of only $863.91. Much of that sum would probably be applied to courthouse remodeling and repairs later in the year.

sentenced him to a six-months term in the county jail.

On a similar charge to which he pleaded guilty, Glenn Richardson was also fined $120. The judge revoked his drivers license for a year, and placed him on probation for a year.

Another $120 fine was assessed against Alvin Chesly Haynes who also plead guilty to a state charge of driving while intoxicated. His driver license was revoked for a year and he was given six months in jail and placed on probation.

Fined $35 was David Ash, who was charged with petit larceny. He was sentenced to a 90-day jail term with the understanding that probation will be granted upon payment of the fine.

Albert Lee Thornton was charged with careless and imprudent driving by excessive speed and with being an unlicensed operator and he was fined $40 by the judge.

Charged with careless and imprudent driving and with no operator license, Leroy Junior Harris was fined $15.00 on each count.

Paying fines of $15 each for careless and imprudent driving were John F. Lawrence and Dennie Juneau Little, and paying $15 on speeding charges were Orsville Mackie Springer and Donald Dewitt.

Fines of $11 each were assessed against Earl Henry Eaves and Ezzard C. Long for improper registration, and Paul A. Barfoot for having expired license.

ject. All the boys said the striking feature about it was that it made no sound and just before it disappeared it turned a bright white. The youths said it hurt their eyes to look at it when it turned white. It then disappeared in a southwesterly direction, the youths said.

The youths said it hovered for at least two minutes in one spot, then took off at a high rate of speed.

It wasn't an airplane, because it was low enough to be heard if it had been a plane. It made no sound, and it changed colors, the youths said.

Gary Byrd said it was football shaped with red lights on each end and another red light in the middle.

Police said they received three calls reporting unidentified objects Thursday between 6:02 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Two of the calls came from the Russell and Byrd boys.

The other call was from Mrs. Gerda Harrison, 614 Daniel. She said she first saw a "greenish colored object to the east" at about 6:30 p.m. as she was driving home.

She said she watched the object from the window of her residence for more than a half hour. Mrs. Harrison said she called a friend, Mrs. Ruth Turner, 424 South Kingshighway, who also reported seeing the light.

Several reports of unidentified flying objects have been made in the past three days in Cape Girardeau, Charleston, Bragg City and Cairo.

The Missouri highway patrol at Poplar Bluff says it has received numerous reports of unidentified flying objects during the last three or four days.

A radio dispatcher for the patrol said, "they've been seeing things for the last three or four night. I don't know what they've been seeing, but I think its the planet Venus."

Two policemen at Cairo, across the Mississippi River, rushed to a levee after hearing radio reports of the objects.

Patrolman Gene Smith said, "If Carl Jones hadn't been with me I wouldn't have said a word about it."

Smith and Jones reported the object they saw featured red and white, pulsating lights which turned green at five-second intervals.

lied commanders reported a series of clashes from the southern tip of the country through the northern provinces.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported a government force of regimental size--about 1,500 men —launched a search-and-destroy sweep in southernmost An Xuyen Province and in the first day killed 16 Viet Cong. This was one of five scattered operations in which the Vietnamese command said a total of 43 Viet Cong were killed. Casualties to government troops were reported light in all five.

Vietnamese headquarters also reported that government troops repulsed a mortar and ground attack against a military post 60 miles southwest of Saigon in the Mekong Delta. A spokesman said 15 Viet Cong were killed and government casualties were light.

In the northern province of Thua Thien, the U.S. Marine base camp and airstrip at Phu Bai, 10 miles southeast of Hue, was hit by 30 to 35 mortar rounds today, but U.S. headquarters said U.S. casualties and damage to equipment were light.

The two planes that went down Thursday raised the total reported lost in the air war against the north to 462. North Vietnam claimed three planes were shot down Thursday.

One of the planes lost was a carrier-based Navy A6 Intruder and the other was an Air Force F4C Phantom jet. Each carried two men who were listed as missing. U. S. headquarters said the cause of the crashes was not known.

Air Force jet bombers pounded three railroad yards 50 to 60 miles northeast of Hanoi, and pilots reports damage to rail lines and boxcars.

Other Air Force pilots reported cutting the northeast rail line in five places 60 to 118 miles northwest of Hanoi. The two lines are the main rail arteries between Hanoi and China.

Only minor sniper fire was reported in Operation Cedar Falls, the big American sweep of the iron triangle 20 to 30 miles north of Saigon. U.S. forces have reported killing 548 Communist soldiers since the operation started Jan. 8.

Cobalt Therapy To Be Offered In Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO. -- Authorization has been given by the Board of Trustees of Southeast Missouri Hospital here for installation of a cobalt radiation therapy unit for treatment of various types of cancer.

The unit will be the only one between St. Louis and Memphis, Tenn., and west to Springfield, Missouri.

The board approved a campaign of $40,000 to purchase the equipment and directed construction of a building costing $65,000 to house it and two X-ray diagnostic rooms. It also authorized purchase of $45,000 in X-ray diagnostic equipment, for a total outlay of $150,000.

The hospital recently completed a $1,300,000 addition, which, when completely staffed, will add 62 beds to its capacity.

The addition will occupy a section of the courtyard adjacent to an addition erected in 1957. Plans and specifications have been approved by the Atomic Energy Commission.

MATT'S LEARNED:

To tie his shoes
Name the different hues;
Count to way up there!
Sit in "Happy Chair";

Give his father's name,
And his Mom's -- the same;
Say his street address,
And spell all the rest--

He says, "Thank you Mam,"
And will shake your hand;
And, "Excuse it please,"
At the littlest sneeze.

So you'd think by now,
Since he's grasped this lore,
He'd at least know how
To not slam the door!

Cong Hideout Located

SAIGON AP -- Operation Cedar Falls turned up a massive tunnel today within the Iron Triangle that may have served as the long- sought headquarters of the Viet Cong's 4th Military Region, from which Communists have launched attacks on Saigon outposts.

Men of the U. S. 196th Light Infantry Brigade probed the tunnel. Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, the brigade commander, said they found maps, plans, weapons, booby traps and some guerrillas within the vast boring, 25 miles northwest of Saigon. This was one phase of a drive engaging about 30,000 American and South Vietnamese troops.

In the air war, American bombers hammered at North Vietnamese rail yards and main lines Thursday for the fourth straight day. But U. S. military headquarters reported two of the planes and the four fliers who manned them did not return.

Many of the strikes were against the northeast line, along "MIG Valley" in the Red River Delta, but there was no report of any MIGs rising to challenge the American raiders.

Ground fighting in South Vietnam was confined to small, scattered engagements, but al-

Long to Publish Book Probing Wiretapping

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., will publish a book Feb. 20 about his investigation of wiretapping and "bugging" by government agencies and private industry.

The book, called "The Intruders," will be published by Fredericak A. Praeger Inc. of New York and will have a foreword by Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

"The Justice Department's use of wiretapping," Long charged in the book, "and its double standard of enforcement, running from lukewarm efforts against private wiretappers to none at all against law-enforcement wiretappers, has had a disastrous effect on privacy...

The guilty and innocent alike have shared the anonymous attentions of the snoopers."

Long recalls a Senate hearing before his subcommittee which "produced the dismaying example of a New York police officer who, by means of a single tap, overheard conversations involving the Julliard School of Music, Brooklyn Law School, Consolidated Radio Artists, Western Union, the Mercantile National Bank, the Medical Bureau to aid Spanish Democracy, brokers, engineers, a dry cleaner, numerous bars and - a little welcome irony here - a New York precinct stationhouse.

GOP Broadcast Gag Rule

JEFFERSON CITY, (AP) — Republican state and legislative leaders today joined in a denunciation of the House Democrats' apparent insistence on censoring any edited radio or television tape of House action.

They called it the "broadcasting gag rule" and urged members of the Democratic majority to join them in correcting the rule.

Rep. R. J. King of Clayton, minority floor leader, said he tried to bail the Democrats out with an amendment Jan. 11 but the majority members used a solid front for the strict rule.

A few of the most serious sponsors of the rule think edited tapes might make them look bad by taking portions of a floor debate "out of context."

Here are portions of the statements of the GOP leaders:

National Committeemen Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie — "Censorship has never been and is not now compatible with freedom. The voters will ultimately decide the rights and wrongs of this issue."

National Committeewoman Rosemary Ginn of Columbia — "If Missouri Democrats are trying to disassociate themselves from the policies of the Great Society, they are certainly doing a poor job of it."

State GOP Chairman Dorman Steelman of Salem -- "Why do the Democrats want to hide behind the gag rule? Does the governor directly or indirectly have anything to with this?"

Rep. Martin Degenhardt of Perryville, head of the GOP policy committee — "Actually this suggests a complete lack of willingness on the part of the Democratic leadership to adequately inform the public and therefore negates their avowal of being servants of the people."

King — "Rule 107B is censorship in the strictest sense of the word."

Rep. Robert E. Young of Carthage, assistant floor leader — "The Missouri House should again show the nation and the world that Missouri leads the way in expressing the spirit of representative government by renewing the former free and open broadcasting rule."

Caucus chairman Vernon Betz of Trenton — "This censorship rule which was adopted by the Missouri House of Representatives could, if carried through in principle, lead to the barring of all news media from any reporting of proceedings in any level of government."

60 Listen to Appeal for Expanded Library Serrvice

Sixty Southeast Missouri public library directors, librarians, city officials and library patrons heard a plea last night for expanded library service in Missouri.

Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, said that Missouri's present law limits, "possiblities for expansion of service."

He appeared as one of a panel of three to explain a proposed recodification of state library laws and to explain the bill to be submitted in the Missouri legislature. With him were Dominic Troiani and Phillip Maxeiner, St. Louis attorneys who drafted it.

Franklin Struwe, vice president of the public library board, introduced O'Halloran.

The Missouri Library Association has endorsed the proposed new library law and O'Halloran said that 30 librarians in the state helped draft it.

"In 20 years Missouri libraries have made incredible progress," O'Halloran said. "Ninety per cent of the people are served by a library. Libraries have moved out of cities to serve the people in outlying regions."

He said that Missouri was "the only state with a constitutional provision for state support of libraries."

In answer to a question by City Manager W. Raymert Miller, O'Halloran said that "Sikeston might become a part of something bigger" under the proposed new law.

Under the terms of the law, however, Sikeston could continue to obtain state aid for its municipal library. The proposed law permits such aid for city libraries having 5,000 or more inhabitants, which levy a two - mill tax. Sikeston qualifies on both counts.

Under the law the library board would operate as a separate unit from city government.

Sikeston could join another county or counties or become part of a Scott county library system if a majority voted for it or by joint action of library boards.

Under the bill existing libraries would not be disturbed but because small municipal libraries would not qualify for state aid the formation of larger library districts would be encouraged.

Librarians or library officials attending the meeting were from Cape Girardeau, Marble Hill, Poplar Bluff, Potosi, Bufordville, Gordonville, Van Buren, Dexter, Jackson, Charleston, Leopold, New Madrid and Perryville as well as Sikeston.

FRANKLIN STRUWE, vice president of the public library board, left, stands beside Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, who came to Sikeston last night to explain a proposed new Missmuci library law to Southeast Missouri library officials.

Crop Diversion Funds Not Sufficient for Demands

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, (AP) — The Agriculture Department faces the possibility of having to say "no" to some farmers who have indicated they would like to retire additional cropland from production for 5 to 10 years in return for government payments.

It reported today that 74,033 applications had been turned in by Jan. 12 for putting 5,968,549 acres of cropland under the program designed to help prevent overproduction of crops and to provide land for recreation, wildlife habitat, erosion control, open space and natural beauty.

Congress had authorized a limit of $80 million to cover payments this year on land diverted from crops. Officials estimated however, that it would take about $133 million to cover present applications.

And even more applications may come in because farmers have until March 3 to submit them.

The department emphasized, however, that no contracts with farmers have been signed yet. In view of this, it said, there could be substantial withdrawals as farmers determine the application of the program to their farms.

Officials said that if the total offers exceed available funds, it may become necessary to determine which of the applications should be accepted to accomplish the various objectives of the program. Generally speaking, those who filed earlier would be the first to get contracts.

Last year, about 36,000 agreements covering about 2 million acres of land were accepted by the department.

The department said that an additional 1,324,051 acres were being offered for retirement by farmers this year under supplemental agreement which would allow free public use of the land for hunting, fishing, trapping and hiking.

UFOs Seen In Sky

A 15-year-old boy returning home from a neighborhood grocery store Thursday evening lost control of his bicycle and struck a fence off West Murray Lane near the Southwest school.

His attention had been fixed on a "hovering green object with flashing red lights."

The youth's younger brother was awaiting his return in the back yard of a residence at 837 Wayne. The boy was straddling a wood picket fence and watching "a green object with a red light in the middle of it."

Four other boys playing scootball under floodlights in the same back yard were distracted by the light.

Gary Byrd, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Byrd, 613 Carroll, picked up his bicyle, and hurried to the yard, where his brother Jessie Lee, 8, was standing.

"I asked Danny Russell if he saw it. And he said he had," Burd said.

The Russell youth was one of the four boys playing scootball.

The boys said they first saw the object at about 5:45 p.m. It seemed to be almost straight above the school when it was hovering, Byrd said.

Both he and his brother gave similar descriptions of the ob-

60 Listen to Appeal for Expanded Library Serrvice

Sixty Southeast Missouri public library directors, librarians, city officials and library patrons heard a plea last night for expanded library service in Missouri.

Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, said that Missouri's present law limits, "possiblities for expansion of service."

He appeared as one of a panel of three to explain a proposed recodification of state library laws and to explain the bill to be submitted in the Missouri legislature. With him were Dominic Troiani and Phillip Maxeiner, St. Louis attorneys who drafted it.

Franklin Struwe, vice president of the public library board, introduced O'Halloran.

The Missouri Library Association has endorsed the proposed new library law and O'Halloran said that 30 librarians in the state helped draft it.

"In 20 years Missouri libraries have made incredible progress," O'Halloran said. "Ninety per cent of the people are served by a library. Libraries have moved out of cities to serve the people in outlying regions."

He said that Missouri was "the only state with a constitutional provision for state support of libraries."

In answer to a question by City Manager W. Raymert Miller, O'Halloran said that "Sikeston might become a part of something bigger" under the proposed new law.

Under the terms of the law, however, Sikeston could continue to obtain state aid for its municipal library. The proposed law permits such aid for city libraries having 5,000 or more inhabitants, which levy a two - mill tax. Sikeston qualifies on both counts.

Under the law the library board would operate as a separate unit from city government.

Sikeston could join another county or counties or become part of a Scott county library system if a majority voted for it or by joint action of library boards.

Under the bill existing libraries would not be disturbed but because small municipal libraries would not qualify for state aid the formation of larger library districts would be encouraged.

Librarians or library officials attending the meeting were from Cape Girardeau, Marble Hill, Poplar Bluff, Potosi, Bufordville, Gordonville, Van Buren, Dexter, Jackson, Charleston, Leopold, New Madrid and Perryville as well as Sikeston.

FRANKLIN STRUWE, vice president of the public library board, left, stands beside Charles O'Halloran, Jefferson City, state librarian, who came to Sikeston last night to explain a proposed new Missmuci library law to Southeast Missouri library officials.

Crop Diversion Funds Not Sufficient for Demands

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, (AP) — The Agriculture Department faces the possibility of having to say "no" to some farmers who have indicated they would like to retire additional cropland from production for 5 to 10 years in return for government payments.

It reported today that 74,033 applications had been turned in by Jan. 12 for putting 5,968,549 acres of cropland under the program designed to help prevent overproduction of crops and to provide land for recreation, wildlife habitat, erosion control, open space and natural beauty.

Congress had authorized a limit of $80 million to cover payments this year on land diverted from crops. Officials estimated however, that it would take about $133 million to cover present applications.

And even more applications may come in because farmers have until March 3 to submit them.

The department emphasized, however, that no contracts with farmers have been signed yet. In view of this, it said, there could be substantial withdrawals as farmers determine the application of the program to their farms.

Officials said that if the total offers exceed available funds, it may become necessary to determine which of the applications should be accepted to accomplish the various objectives of the program. Generally speaking, those who filed earlier would be the first to get contracts.

Last year, about 36,000 agreements covering about 2 million acres of land were accepted by the department.

The department said that an additional 1,324,051 acres were being offered for retirement by farmers this year under supplemental agreement which would allow free public use of the land for hunting, fishing, trapping and hiking.

LOSE ALL AROUND

PITTSBURGH, Pa (AP) - Four men who dropped $175 in a dice game got a further jolt when they appeared in city court to pay $10 fines each for gambling.

Robert Maloney, the man to whom they lost the $175, failed to show up and forfeited his $25 bond and his dice. The dice were found to be loaded.

UFOs Seen In Sky

A 15-year-old boy returning home from a neighborhood grocery store Thursday evening lost control of his bicycle and struck a fence off West Murray Lane near the Southwest school.

His attention had been fixed on a "hovering green object with flashing red lights."

The youth's younger brother was awaiting his return in the back yard of a residence at 837 Wayne. The boy was straddling a wood picket fence and watching "a green object with a red light in the middle of it."

Four other boys playing scootball under floodlights in the same back yard were distracted by the light.

Gary Byrd, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Byrd, 613 Carroll, picked up his bicyle, and hurried to the yard, where his brother Jessie Lee, 8, was standing.

"I asked Danny Russell if he saw it. And he said he had," Burd said.

The Russell youth was one of the four boys playing scootball.

The boys said they first saw the object at about 5:45 p.m. It seemed to be almost straight above the school when it was hovering, Byrd said.

Both he and his brother gave similar descriptions of the ob-

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Rex Whitton has returned to Independence. It is Missouri's gain and the nation's loss.

For six dynamic years he served as federal highway administrator. He provided leadership for the development of the interstate highway system in the federal role in constructing the interstate road network and in setting and maintaining standards for it.

With great administrative skill and expert engineering application, Whitton served the country with distinction.

His office disbursed millions of dollars without a suggestion of misappropriation of funds or hint of scandal.

Missourians are proud of the record.

Sikeston residents always have taken a personal interest in Whitton's career because he is familiar with our flora and fauna.

Briefly in the 1920s he was district 10 construction engineer. He left Sikeston for the Jefferson City headquarters, where he served for a decade as chief engineer of the Missouri state highway department before moving on to Washington, D. C.

His public career has been notable for the progress made in highway development both in Missouri and throughout the nation.

Whitton will not be idle.

He has joined a large private engineering firm in Kansas City and has many interests in Missouri.

All citizens of the state will benefit from the knowledge he gained in a long and useful career of public service at the state and national levels.

Welcome home Rex.

Clyde Poe is dead. His friends are sorry but he lived a long life, which speaks eloquently for him while he is silent.

Clyde was an excellent listener, a humble, modest man.

Too few mortals pattern their lives after him but he served others well, built friendships, was highly respected and served others with quiet dedication.

By temperament and habit he was almost an ideal funeral director.

He possessed the ability to be a friend to others to an uncommon degree.

He inspired confidence and transmitted understanding, and he was able to draw sorrow quietly from the bereaved.

He was unusually gifted in this respect. The same qualities, which made him an effective funeral director, served him well during almost a quarter of a century as coroner.

Clyde was not a man to rush into a conversation, to impress others with what he knew, to throw his weight or authority around. He merely was dependably there when he was needed, eager to listen, to dispense with understanding and comfort if the occasion required it.

His stewardship in church and community affairs was in keeping with his business personality. He made friends everywhere he went without bombast.

To an uncommon degree in a world that is largely materialistic, full of sales gimmicks and showmanship, and often selfish, he contributed humility, service and love of mankind.

His friends will miss him.

Just how important is a small newspaper advertisement?

"The newspaper advertisement is a written promise to the prospect which is officially signed by the advertiser with his logotype," said one man who is in charge of advertising for more than 5,000 food stores placing ads in 3,000 newspapers each week. To him each advertisement is a serious effort.

"The ad is a real document - a contract - sober, responsible, considered," he said. "It represents an irreplaceable contract between buyer and seller."

The public is not easily duped, and today's merchants know it. The steady decline of fraudulent and misleading advertisements in recent years attests to a well-educated consuming public and a more honest group of businessmen.

Consumers are more likely to believe what they see in print - and for good reason. A newspaper ad offers time and space to fully describe products.

Real bargains are easily recognized in the newspaper, and the consumer can fully satisfy himself about quality and usefulness of the product. Honesty of claims can be thoroughly checked.

Newspapers not only have a "responsibility" to keep distasteful advertising out of print, but they have a "right" to do so, a Pennsylvania Commons Pleas Judge said recently. Most publishers feel it is their responsibility to protect customers.

For practical reasons, there is no better place for consumers to find a competent listing of reliable products than in the advertising columns of local newspapers. It pays the retailer, the consumer and the public.

Spurred on by ever-mounting traffic tolls, the American auto industry is increasingly turning its attention to the problems of driving safety.

Ford is spending in excess of $1,000,000 in a nationwide advertising campaign promoting safety. The money is paying for a giant-sized advertisement - actually a booklet - entitled "A Positive View of Good Driving Habits." The ad is being run in several important national publications.

Likewise, General Motors is handing out a million copies of a booklet entitled "Designs for Safety," which lists the corporation's contribution to safety over the years. GM has also begun a series of institutional ads on auto safety which the company says will reach 28,000,000 persons.

Oil industry firms are climbing on the safety wagon too. Mobil is running a series of ads that will give drivers tips on how to avoid accidents.

The aim of all this effort seems to make the habits of American drivers safer.

On the other side of the coin, a one-time Washington lawyer named Ralph Nader has written a book titled "Unsafe at Any Speed" which calls for radical changes in the American automobile to produce safer driving.

Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana has called for expanding the Interstate Highway system from its current projected 41,000 miles to 66,000 miles as a prime method of reducing highway carnage. The Senator cited the much higher fatality rate on two-lane conventional highways during the last Christmas and New Years holidays. Only six per cent of the grim holiday total of 1,287 traffic deaths occurred on the Interstate System, Bureau of Public Roads figures show.

All this seems to indicate that there are still three basic ingredients in highway safety - the driver, the vehicle and the road. For safer driving, we need improvement in all three.

LONDON (AP) —Britain's National Childbirth Trust has just given birth to a booklet of advice for expectant fathers.

That's right -- expectant fathers.

If the father-to-be has not yet been seized by the jitters of approaching parenthood, this well-intended and generally helpful pamphlet, should do much to produce them.

For instance, he is advised to take a firm line with his wife when she begins talking about buying a baby carriage.

The National Childbirth Trust says the husband should be able to talk his wife out of buying the perambulator of her heart's desire unless it will, or will not, do certain things.

Father-to-be is told that the baby carriages with weak, or poor brakes is not a good buy. If this is his first baby, who's to help with the testing?

The booklet counsels the expectant father to organize his wife for the coming blessed event by getting her to apply some time and motion studies to such things as feeding, bathing and cleaning the baby.

More frightening than this, however, is the recommendation that the expectant father should join the expectant mother in the daily exercises she is expected to do.

Among other chores the expectant father is advised to assume is a more careful attitude towards the family automobile, such as nightly checks of the tires, battery, gasoline and oil.

He is told to learn in advance the quickest and smoothest route to the hospital.

As almost any father knows, there are times before the great event when time hangs heavy on his hands as well as his wife's.

"Keep yourself amused with light household chores, music, or a game of cards," is the advice to husbands.

If the expectant father assumes that his ordeal is over with the baby's arrival, then he is wrong.

The trust says that after the birth, father should buy more books about babies, suggesting such fascinating titles as "the First Nine Months of Life," and "Caring for the New Baby."

The booklet also suggests that the husband of a working wife, one who has given up a job to have a baby, should give his wife a personal weekly allowance to "spend as she pleases."

Having money of her own, says the trust, is probably the best tonic of all.

Three girls and a man were brought before the presiding judge. The girls had been arrested for soliciting and the man was arrested for peddling without a license.

"What do you do for a living?" the judge asked, pointing to the first girl.

"Your honor, I'm a model," she answered.

"Thirty days," was the sentence. Then he turned to the second. "What do you do for a living?" he asked.

"Your honor, I'm a T.V. actress."

"Thirty days." Then he turned to the third girl. "What do you do for a living?" he demanded.

"To tell you the truth," she answered, "I'm a prostitute."

"For telling the truth," he said, "I'm going to suspend sentence." Then he turned to the little peddler. "And you," he said, "what do you do for a living?"

"To tell you the truth," the peddler said, twisting his hat in his hands, "I'm a prostitute also."

MAKING THE MOST OF THE TOOLS

No one, except the most dedicated of socialized power advocates, can any longer doubt the ability of the investor - owned electric utilities to meet any and all of the needs of this nation. That power is supplied at rates regulated by public bodies -- rates which allow only for the costs of providing service plus a very modest profit. And, in the process, the utilities are among the largest and most dependable payers of taxes to governments at all levels in every section of the country.

An outstanding example of progress in which utilities have played a leading role is the production of power from nuclear sources. Not long ago, many thought it would be years before such power was economically feasible. But, one by one, and more swiftly than was generally believed at the beginning, the problems have been solved and the barriers eliminated or lowered. Today, in many areas nuclear power is becoming competitive in cost with power from conventional fuels.

New York is now providing another example of this. There the Consolidated Edison Company's board of trustees have authorized the construction of a nuclear generating unit having an initial rating of 873,000 kilowatts. Operation is scheduled for the spring of 1969. It will be an all-nuclear installation, powered by a pressurized water reactor. And it is a very big undertaking indeed, with the cost estimated at $108 million.

This illustrates the way investor-owned utilities the nation over anticipate the needs of the future and prepare for them. And they make the most of every available tool, whether it be new or old.

NEW ANTI-RIGHT GROUP

Not so many years ago American collectivists often accused the American Right, by which they meant all who love their country and the values of individual self-reliance and personal enterprise on which it was built, of using "guilt by association" to condemn others. Now, guilt by association has become a principal stock in trade of the collectivists themselves.

Four years ago a shadowy and secretive organization with the bland title of Group Research, Inc. opened an office in Washington. Its purpose soon proved to be to condemn every group and individual who spoke out strongly for individual liberty and patriotism, by linking the speakers with other groups and individuals who were unpopular or irresponsible. This guilt by association was based on the flimsiest evidence, where they was any evidence to support it at all. But it had a measurable impact on public opinion.

Edith Kermit Roosevelt, in her columns, alerted her readers to Group Research, Inc. Group Research, Inc. has been less active recently, but a new anti-Right group has been established in Washington. It is called the Institute for American Democracy. It plans a fulltime program of attack and harassment upon patriotic and pro-freedom groups and speakers, which it chooses to call "extremist." In what has become an all too familiar fashion, the Institute for American Democracy uses that hollow word "extremist" to describe any and every organization and activity on the Right of which it disapproves.

The Institute for American Democracy has already announced plans to ask for censorship of what it calls "right-wing" radio broadcasts by the Federal Communications Commission. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - Toughest battler in the U.S. Senate is a man who doesn't talk much about his battles. He is the number two Republican, Sen. Tom Kuchel of California.

Most of his Senate colleagues don't know it, but Sen. Kuchel last year turned down an offer of $175,000 a year for ten years to become head of the Motion Picutre Producers Association, a job which later went to LBJ's right-hand man, Jack Valenti.

Kuchel vetoed the job not because he shied away from association with the acting profession. He already associates with his Republican colleague in the Senate, George Murphy, a former tap-dancer. Another actor, Ronald Reagan, hero of many westerns, has just been elected Republican governor of California.

Rather, Kuchel vetoed the job because he didn't want to run away from a fight. He knew right-wing Republicans were out to get him in 1968, and a victory by them would mean the end of the Liberal Republicanism which elected Hiram Johnson, Earl Warren, Goodwin Knight and Kuchel in California.

Once before, the right wing tried to smear Kuchel with a below-the-belt story about his life. He forced a showdown. Result: Three men were convicted for criminal libel.

There will be another tough political showdown in California next year, and Kuchel once more expects to win.

ADAM'S PROFESSION

Rep. John Brademas of South Bend, Ind., was concerned over educational problems back in his district and dropped in to see the Chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem. There was wrath in Brademas's eye, because he had warned the chairman that educational snafus were likely to happen.

Before he could express that wrath, however, the chairman thrust a glass of champagne in his hand.

"Sit down, John, and cool off before you express yourself," said Mr. Powell.

Brademas sat down in one of the overstuffed leather chairs in the chairman's office. He looked up at the paneled walls, the high ceiling, the perfect appointments.

"Good lord, Adam, how do you do it?" asked the congressman from South Bend.

"Working for Jesus," replied the congressman from Harlem.

TWO MISSING VOTES

Lurleen Wallace, the new governess of Alabama, got some under-the-breath criticism from Texas and Dixiecrat congressmen who otherwise would have been rooting for her on the day she was inaugurated.

They attributed to her the fact that they lost the chance to stack the Powerful Ways and Means Committee with a Southerner, Rep. Omar Burleson of Texas. Instead, a New York Liberal Democrat, Jacob Gilbert of the Bronx, was elected to the Key Committee which not only initiates all tax and fiscal legislation but selects which Democrats shall sit on what committees.

The vote in the Democratic caucus for Gilbert instead of Burleson was 115 to 113. The two missing votes which would have swung the balance were those of two Alabama Congressmen, Armistead Selden and George Andrews. They had gone down to Montgomery to pay tribute to the new governess of Alabama as she took the oath of office. Their absence will influence the voting in key committes for the next two years.

LBJ'S MESSAGES

Comments that LBJ's state of the union message was too long and that some congressmen got tired of listening, inspired us to do some research.

It didn't take any wiretapping or bugging to find that the president's message was 5,981 words long and that it lasted approximately one hour and 10 mumutes. Of course part of this time was taken up with applause - exactly 47 interruptions.

As to how long each interruption lasted, we could get no exact information, but probably averaged about 10 seconds. It was Sen. George Aiken, the gnarled Republican orchardist from Vermont, who, sitting in the front row, usually led the applause. Aiken comes from a state which has gone Republican oftener than any other in the union, nevertheless he seemed to like what the Democratic president said.

Bobby Kennedy, a Democratic Senator from N. Y., did not appear to like it so much. He did not applaud when the president came out vigorously against wiretapping.

Further research disclosed the fact that the late John F. Kennedy's state of the union messages had run longer than Johnson's 5,981 words - namely 7,000 words in 1961, 7,500 words in 1962 and 6,400 in 1963. His average was 6,967 words.

IKE WAS WORDY

Eisenhower was wordier. Ike delivered nine state of the union messages for an average of 7,610 words. Johnson's average for four speeches has been 5,695.

But Harry Truman, supposed to be a succinct guy, more adept at Missouri mule driver language than eloquent oratory, topped them all. In Harry's first message in 1946, just after assuming the presidency, he gave the Congress 24,000 words on the state of the union.

After this, Harry learned his lesson and dropped to 7,647 in 1947.

When Eisenhower first assumed office in 1953, he bored Congress with a total of 10,812 words.

Roosevelt's state of the union messages were the shortest. They generally ran to around 3,000 to 4,000 words. His shortest was in 1934 - only 2,574; his longest was the last - 9,720 words, delivered in 1945, four months before he died.

Inside Labor

Prosecutors Predict Return of Murder, Inc. Style Of Racketeering When the "Bug" Is Banned.

Washington, D.C.: -- A flash-fire rebirth of old style Murder, Inc. -- labor-industrial syndicated racketeering -- is being predicted by doleful federal and state prosecutors.

They talk of the swift return of deported Mafia chiefs such as "Mr. A" Joe "Adonis" Doto, now legendary and almost forgotten though he rode high alongside the Murder, Inc. executioners.

These are the millionaire Cosa Nostra men who were traced, trapped and finally exiled, convicted or executed by the state on the basis of wiretapping evidence.

Now all these thousands of cases are under review by the Justice Dept. -- and even if there is the barest mention of a single name and then only for a single moment and the convicted one is alive, the sentence may well be reversed and the prisoner freed or his deportation order lifted.

Furthermore the prosecutors with whom I've talked over the past few weeks see the end of their ability to "get into the crime syndicate inner sanctum or to keep a 24-hour surveillance of organized crime leaders still milking unions, labor welfare and pension funds and private business."

They see new laws coming which will outlaw electronic or wiretap eavesdropping in all but investigation into threats to the national security.

Just the other day in a long conversation with N.Y. Congressman Emanuel Celler, the influential head of the powerful House Judiciary Committee, this was corroborated.

"I will push a bill," said Mr. Celler, dean of the House "which will ban the use of of all wiretapping and electronic listening except in cases of national emergency and security involving treason and sabotage. This will ban wiretapping and the electronic stuff even in the fight against organized crime."

The venerable Congressman said his old friend, J. Edgar Hoover would testify "reasonably soon" at Committee hearings.

During this column's survey of the use of wiretapping and electronic gadgetry in the struggle with organized crime's executives in charge of the labor front, several intriguing documents cropped up. One was a report from New York's crusading District Attorney Frank Hogan, who has been battling the big time rackets for 25 years, you know, ever since the colorful days which now make TV scripts.

In this document Mr. Hogan reveals that the law never could have cracked Murder Inc.; convicted the late world narcotics chief "Lucky" Luciano, who introduced wholesale murder and muscle into the labor arena; never could have gotten Murder, Inc.'s chief Louis "Lepke" Buchalter to the death chamber; never could have sent up "Lepke's" partner "Gurrah" Shapiro; never could have imprisoned the food market's monopolist and terrorist of labor leaders, Joe "Socks" Lanza; never could have convicted the still free acidity Johnny Dio -- without wiretapping.

Wiretaps, says Mr. Hogan, "have been invaluable in exposing racketeering in certain union welfare funds." On the basis of "intercepted conversations," he adds, his office established a conspiracy involving "the notorious George Scalise, a powerful racketeer who seized unions, and others who milked the fund of over $300,000. Behind them was "the gun," the late "Little Augie" Pisano, who departed this earth loaded with instant lead.

It was not only Mr. Hogan who thus penetrated the inner sanctums. There was the Justice Dept. during Bob Kennedy's years.

In a report, made not long before he stepped down, the then Attorney General said the government knew "that in the past two years at least three carefully planned (Cosa Nostra national) Commission meetings had to be called off because the leaders learned that we had uncovered their well-concealed plans and meeting places. We know that because of federal intelligence efforts other Commission meetings have been limited to one or two members and have been held in highly clandestine fashion."

These Commission members to which Bob Kennedy referred are the men who direct the racketeers who seize unions and their funds and who are described today by the highest law enforcement agents as "the toughest, roughest, dirtiest, below-the-belt mobsters."

"If we can't wiretap," asked the same source, "how are we going to protect labor and industry? We are in the electronic age. We can't use horse and buggies any more than the FBI could back in the thirties when the racketeers began using short wave radios, fast cars and machine guns.

"We had to watch them. If we don't move along with them today, if we can't get into their inner sanctums, we might as well go read Sherlock Holmes and the public better be prepared for the return of those old bloody days -- tell that to the labor and business leaders."

Thus the mood is melancholy amongst those who mourn of the passing of the bug and warn of the return of the pestilence.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Rex Whitton has returned to Independence. It is Missouri's gain and the nation's loss.

For six dynamic years he served as federal highway administrator. He provided leadership for the development of the interstate highway system in the federal role in constructing the interstate road network and in setting and maintaining standards for it.

With great administrative skill and expert engineering application, Whitton served the country with distinction.

His office disbursed millions of dollars without a suggestion of misappropriation of funds or hint of scandal.

Missourians are proud of the record.

Sikeston residents always have taken a personal interest in Whitton's career because he is familiar with our flora and fauna.

Briefly in the 1920s he was district 10 construction engineer. He left Sikeston for the Jefferson City headquarters, where he served for a decade as chief engineer of the Missouri state highway department before moving on to Washington, D. C.

His public career has been notable for the progress made in highway development both in Missouri and throughout the nation.

Whitton will not be idle.

He has joined a large private engineering firm in Kansas City and has many interests in Missouri.

All citizens of the state will benefit from the knowledge he gained in a long and useful career of public service at the state and national levels.

Welcome home Rex.

Clyde Poe is dead. His friends are sorry but he lived a long life, which speaks eloquently for him while he is silent.

Clyde was an excellent listener, a humble, modest man.

Too few mortals pattern their lives after him but he served others well, built friendships, was highly respected and served others with quiet dedication.

By temperament and habit he was almost an ideal funeral director.

He possessed the ability to be a friend to others to an uncommon degree.

He inspired confidence and transmitted understanding, and he was able to draw sorrow quietly from the bereaved.

He was unusually gifted in this respect. The same qualities, which made him an effective funeral director, served him well during almost a quarter of a century as coroner.

Clyde was not a man to rush into a conversation, to impress others with what he knew, to throw his weight or authority around. He merely was dependably there when he was needed, eager to listen, to dispense with understanding and comfort if the occasion required it.

His stewardship in church and community affairs was in keeping with his business personality. He made friends everywhere he went without bombast.

To an uncommon degree in a world that is largely materialistic, full of sales gimmicks and showmanship, and often selfish, he contributed humility, service and love of mankind.

His friends will miss him.

Just how important is a small newspaper advertisement?

"The newspaper advertisement is a written promise to the prospect which is officially signed by the advertiser with his logotype," said one man who is in charge of advertising for more than 5,000 food stores placing ads in 3,000 newspapers each week. To him each advertisement is a serious effort.

"The ad is a real document - a contract - sober, responsible, considered," he said. "It represents an irreplaceable contract between buyer and seller."

The public is not easily duped, and today's merchants know it. The steady decline of fraudulent and misleading advertisements in recent years attests to a well-educated consuming public and a more honest group of businessmen.

Consumers are more likely to believe what they see in print - and for good reason. A newspaper ad offers time and space to fully describe products.

Real bargains are easily recognized in the newspaper, and the consumer can fully satisfy himself about quality and usefulness of the product. Honesty of claims can be thoroughly checked.

Newspapers not only have a "responsibility" to keep distasteful advertising out of print, but they have a "right" to do so, a Pennsylvania Commons Pleas Judge said recently. Most publishers feel it is their responsibility to protect customers.

For practical reasons, there is no better place for consumers to find a competent listing of reliable products than in the advertising columns of local newspapers. It pays the retailer, the consumer and the public.

Spurred on by ever-mounting traffic tolls, the American auto industry is increasingly turning its attention to the problems of driving safety.

Ford is spending in excess of $1,000,000 in a nationwide advertising campaign promoting safety. The money is paying for a giant-sized advertisement - actually a booklet - entitled "A Positive View of Good Driving Habits." The ad is being run in several important national publications.

Likewise, General Motors is handing out a million copies of a booklet entitled "Designs for Safety," which lists the corporation's contribution to safety over the years. GM has also begun a series of institutional ads on auto safety which the company says will reach 28,000,000 persons.

Oil industry firms are climbing on the safety wagon too. Mobil is running a series of ads that will give drivers tips on how to avoid accidents.

The aim of all this effort seems to make the habits of American drivers safer.

On the other side of the coin, a one-time Washington lawyer named Ralph Nader has written a book titled "Unsafe at Any Speed" which calls for radical changes in the American automobile to produce safer driving.

Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana has called for expanding the Interstate Highway system from its current projected 41,000 miles to 66,000 miles as a prime method of reducing highway carnage. The Senator cited the much higher fatality rate on two-lane conventional highways during the last Christmas and New Years holidays. Only six per cent of the grim holiday total of 1,287 traffic deaths occurred on the Interstate System, Bureau of Public Roads figures show.

All this seems to indicate that there are still three basic ingredients in highway safety - the driver, the vehicle and the road. For safer driving, we need improvement in all three.

LONDON (AP) —Britain's National Childbirth Trust has just given birth to a booklet of advice for expectant fathers.

That's right -- expectant fathers.

If the father-to-be has not yet been seized by the jitters of approaching parenthood, this well-intended and generally helpful pamphlet, should do much to produce them.

For instance, he is advised to take a firm line with his wife when she begins talking about buying a baby carriage.

The National Childbirth Trust says the husband should be able to talk his wife out of buying the perambulator of her heart's desire unless it will, or will not, do certain things.

Father-to-be is told that the baby carriages with weak, or poor brakes is not a good buy. If this is his first baby, who's to help with the testing?

The booklet counsels the expectant father to organize his wife for the coming blessed event by getting her to apply some time and motion studies to such things as feeding, bathing and cleaning the baby.

More frightening than this, however, is the recommendation that the expectant father should join the expectant mother in the daily exercises she is expected to do.

Among other chores the expectant father is advised to assume is a more careful attitude towards the family automobile, such as nightly checks of the tires, battery, gasoline and oil.

He is told to learn in advance the quickest and smoothest route to the hospital.

As almost any father knows, there are times before the great event when time hangs heavy on his hands as well as his wife's.

"Keep yourself amused with light household chores, music, or a game of cards," is the advice to husbands.

If the expectant father assumes that his ordeal is over with the baby's arrival, then he is wrong.

The trust says that after the birth, father should buy more books about babies, suggesting such fascinating titles as "the First Nine Months of Life," and "Caring for the New Baby."

The booklet also suggests that the husband of a working wife, one who has given up a job to have a baby, should give his wife a personal weekly allowance to "spend as she pleases."

Having money of her own, says the trust, is probably the best tonic of all.

Three girls and a man were brought before the presiding judge. The girls had been arrested for soliciting and the man was arrested for peddling without a license.

"What do you do for a living?" the judge asked, pointing to the first girl.

"Your honor, I'm a model," she answered.

"Thirty days," was the sentence. Then he turned to the second. "What do you do for a living?" he asked.

"Your honor, I'm a T.V. actress."

"Thirty days." Then he turned to the third girl. "What do you do for a living?" he demanded.

"To tell you the truth," she answered, "I'm a prostitute."

"For telling the truth," he said, "I'm going to suspend sentence." Then he turned to the little peddler. "And you," he said, "what do you do for a living?"

"To tell you the truth," the peddler said, twisting his hat in his hands, "I'm a prostitute also."

MAKING THE MOST OF THE TOOLS

No one, except the most dedicated of socialized power advocates, can any longer doubt the ability of the investor - owned electric utilities to meet any and all of the needs of this nation. That power is supplied at rates regulated by public bodies -- rates which allow only for the costs of providing service plus a very modest profit. And, in the process, the utilities are among the largest and most dependable payers of taxes to governments at all levels in every section of the country.

An outstanding example of progress in which utilities have played a leading role is the production of power from nuclear sources. Not long ago, many thought it would be years before such power was economically feasible. But, one by one, and more swiftly than was generally believed at the beginning, the problems have been solved and the barriers eliminated or lowered. Today, in many areas nuclear power is becoming competitive in cost with power from conventional fuels.

New York is now providing another example of this. There the Consolidated Edison Company's board of trustees have authorized the construction of a nuclear generating unit having an initial rating of 873,000 kilowatts. Operation is scheduled for the spring of 1969. It will be an all-nuclear installation, powered by a pressurized water reactor. And it is a very big undertaking indeed, with the cost estimated at $108 million.

This illustrates the way investor-owned utilities the nation over anticipate the needs of the future and prepare for them. And they make the most of every available tool, whether it be new or old.

NEW ANTI-RIGHT GROUP

Not so many years ago American collectivists often accused the American Right, by which they meant all who love their country and the values of individual self-reliance and personal enterprise on which it was built, of using "guilt by association" to condemn others. Now, guilt by association has become a principal stock in trade of the collectivists themselves.

Four years ago a shadowy and secretive organization with the bland title of Group Research, Inc. opened an office in Washington. Its purpose soon proved to be to condemn every group and individual who spoke out strongly for individual liberty and patriotism, by linking the speakers with other groups and individuals who were unpopular or irresponsible. This guilt by association was based on the flimsiest evidence, where they was any evidence to support it at all. But it had a measurable impact on public opinion.

Edith Kermit Roosevelt, in her columns, alerted her readers to Group Research, Inc. Group Research, Inc. has been less active recently, but a new anti-Right group has been established in Washington. It is called the Institute for American Democracy. It plans a fulltime program of attack and harassment upon patriotic and pro-freedom groups and speakers, which it chooses to call "extremist." In what has become an all too familiar fashion, the Institute for American Democracy uses that hollow word "extremist" to describe any and every organization and activity on the Right of which it disapproves.

The Institute for American Democracy has already announced plans to ask for censorship of what it calls "right-wing" radio broadcasts by the Federal Communications Commission. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - Toughest battler in the U.S. Senate is a man who doesn't talk much about his battles. He is the number two Republican, Sen. Tom Kuchel of California.

Most of his Senate colleagues don't know it, but Sen. Kuchel last year turned down an offer of $175,000 a year for ten years to become head of the Motion Picutre Producers Association, a job which later went to LBJ's right-hand man, Jack Valenti.

Kuchel vetoed the job not because he shied away from association with the acting profession. He already associates with his Republican colleague in the Senate, George Murphy, a former tap-dancer. Another actor, Ronald Reagan, hero of many westerns, has just been elected Republican governor of California.

Rather, Kuchel vetoed the job because he didn't want to run away from a fight. He knew right-wing Republicans were out to get him in 1968, and a victory by them would mean the end of the Liberal Republicanism which elected Hiram Johnson, Earl Warren, Goodwin Knight and Kuchel in California.

Once before, the right wing tried to smear Kuchel with a below-the-belt story about his life. He forced a showdown. Result: Three men were convicted for criminal libel.

There will be another tough political showdown in California next year, and Kuchel once more expects to win.

ADAM'S PROFESSION

Rep. John Brademas of South Bend, Ind., was concerned over educational problems back in his district and dropped in to see the Chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem. There was wrath in Brademas's eye, because he had warned the chairman that educational snafus were likely to happen.

Before he could express that wrath, however, the chairman thrust a glass of champagne in his hand.

"Sit down, John, and cool off before you express yourself," said Mr. Powell.

Brademas sat down in one of the overstuffed leather chairs in the chairman's office. He looked up at the paneled walls, the high ceiling, the perfect appointments.

"Good lord, Adam, how do you do it?" asked the congressman from South Bend.

"Working for Jesus," replied the congressman from Harlem.

TWO MISSING VOTES

Lurleen Wallace, the new governess of Alabama, got some under-the-breath criticism from Texas and Dixiecrat congressmen who otherwise would have been rooting for her on the day she was inaugurated.

They attributed to her the fact that they lost the chance to stack the Powerful Ways and Means Committee with a Southerner, Rep. Omar Burleson of Texas. Instead, a New York Liberal Democrat, Jacob Gilbert of the Bronx, was elected to the Key Committee which not only initiates all tax and fiscal legislation but selects which Democrats shall sit on what committees.

The vote in the Democratic caucus for Gilbert instead of Burleson was 115 to 113. The two missing votes which would have swung the balance were those of two Alabama Congressmen, Armistead Selden and George Andrews. They had gone down to Montgomery to pay tribute to the new governess of Alabama as she took the oath of office. Their absence will influence the voting in key committes for the next two years.

LBJ'S MESSAGES

Comments that LBJ's state of the union message was too long and that some congressmen got tired of listening, inspired us to do some research.

It didn't take any wiretapping or bugging to find that the president's message was 5,981 words long and that it lasted approximately one hour and 10 mumutes. Of course part of this time was taken up with applause - exactly 47 interruptions.

As to how long each interruption lasted, we could get no exact information, but probably averaged about 10 seconds. It was Sen. George Aiken, the gnarled Republican orchardist from Vermont, who, sitting in the front row, usually led the applause. Aiken comes from a state which has gone Republican oftener than any other in the union, nevertheless he seemed to like what the Democratic president said.

Bobby Kennedy, a Democratic Senator from N. Y., did not appear to like it so much. He did not applaud when the president came out vigorously against wiretapping.

Further research disclosed the fact that the late John F. Kennedy's state of the union messages had run longer than Johnson's 5,981 words - namely 7,000 words in 1961, 7,500 words in 1962 and 6,400 in 1963. His average was 6,967 words.

IKE WAS WORDY

Eisenhower was wordier. Ike delivered nine state of the union messages for an average of 7,610 words. Johnson's average for four speeches has been 5,695.

But Harry Truman, supposed to be a succinct guy, more adept at Missouri mule driver language than eloquent oratory, topped them all. In Harry's first message in 1946, just after assuming the presidency, he gave the Congress 24,000 words on the state of the union.

After this, Harry learned his lesson and dropped to 7,647 in 1947.

When Eisenhower first assumed office in 1953, he bored Congress with a total of 10,812 words.

Roosevelt's state of the union messages were the shortest. They generally ran to around 3,000 to 4,000 words. His shortest was in 1934 - only 2,574; his longest was the last - 9,720 words, delivered in 1945, four months before he died.

Prosecutors Predict Return of Murder, Inc. Style Of Racketeering When the "Bug" Is Banned.

Washington, D.C.: -- A flash-fire rebirth of old style Murder, Inc. -- labor-industrial syndicated racketeering -- is being predicted by doleful federal and state prosecutors.

They talk of the swift return of deported Mafia chiefs such as "Mr. A" Joe "Adonis" Doto, now legendary and almost forgotten though he rode high alongside the Murder, Inc. executioners.

These are the millionaire Cosa Nostra men who were traced, trapped and finally exiled, convicted or executed by the state on the basis of wiretapping evidence.

Now all these thousands of cases are under review by the Justice Dept. -- and even if there is the barest mention of a single name and then only for a single moment and the convicted one is alive, the sentence may well be reversed and the prisoner freed or his deportation order lifted.

Furthermore the prosecutors with whom I've talked over the past few weeks see the end of their ability to "get into the crime syndicate inner sanctum or to keep a 24-hour surveillance of organized crime leaders still milking unions, labor welfare and pension funds and private business."

They see new laws coming which will outlaw electronic or wiretap eavesdropping in all but investigation into threats to the national security.

Just the other day in a long conversation with N.Y. Congressman Emanuel Celler, the influential head of the powerful House Judiciary Committee, this was corroborated.

Mrs. Paul N. Taylor

Miss Connie Louise Chaney Weds Paul Taylor Saturday

POPLAR BLUFF -- The marriage of Miss Connie Louise Chaney and Paul N. Taylor was solemnized at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night in the First Baptist church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Gilbert before a background composed of lighted white tapers in two branched candelabra and greenery, flanked by spiral candelabra. Centering the arrangement was the prie dieu. Marking the bridal aisle were single candelabra, adorned with greenery.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Chaney of Poplar Bluff, formerly of Sikeston. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Alcorn of Sikeston and the niece of Darrell, Dale, and C. D. Alcorn, all of Sikeston and Delmar Alcorn of Bertrand. Taylor's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Taylor.

Van Chaney, brother of the bride, organist, and Miss Margaret Miller, pianist, played a program of prenuptial music and the traditional wedding marches. Miss Miller also accompanied Chaney as he sang "More" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, Saturday's bride wore a wedding gown of Alencon lace over peau de soie. The long sleeved dress was styled on sheath lines with Empire waistline, accented at the wasitline and around the scooped, scalloped neckline with pearl embroidered motifs of the lace. Her long train of lace over tulle was scalloped and edged with the pearl embroidered motifs of lace. Her bouffant shoulder-length veil of illusion was caught to a pearl outlined flower with the petals filled in with the lace motifs. Her gown and veil were designed and fashioned by the mother. The bride carried a white Bible, crested with an arrangement of white roses. Miss Joie Morrison, maid of honor, and Miss Carolyn Newkirk, Miss Terry Rounsaville, Poplar Bluff, and Miss Jeannie Studebaker, Hazelwood, bridesmaids, were gowned alike. The moss green velvet boices with Venice lace encircling the Empire waistlines, had elbow-length sleeves, circled with lace and accented with matching ruffles. The long slim skirts were of moss green crepe and each wore matching green accessories. Their headpieces were large moss green velvet cabbage roses and short bouffant veils. The honor attendant carried a crescent bouquet of tangerine color carnations and the bridesmaids carried nosegays of the same flowers. Their gowns and headpiece were also designed and made by Mrs. Chaney.

Miss Tammy McDonald of Sikeston, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and was attired in a long, moss green velvet dress made on the same lines as the adult attendants' and her headpiece was also similar.

Candles were lighted by Denny Alcorn of Sikeston and Alan Kindred of Kennett, cousins of the bride.

Taylor chose Bill O'Connor as his best man and Carol Taylor, his brother, Paul Arnold and Lonnie King as groomsmen. Taylor and Arnold also seated the guests.

Mrs. Chaney selected for her daughter's wedding a two-piece beige lace dress over matching taffeta. The bodice was scalloped at the waistline and sleeves. Her accessories were beige and her corsage was of green cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue dress, trimmed in matching lace, and red accessories. Her corsage was of white cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Carol Taylor, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was at the guest book at a table covered with white satin and tulle, and adorned with a miniature bridal bouquet.

A reception was given in the fellowship room of the church where the bride's table was covered with a long white satin cloth, covered with white tulle caught up with white satin cabbage roses, ferns and white ribbon streamers. The table was graced with a four-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, and a lovely arrangement of white carnations in a silver container. Another table, covered with white satin and tulle, held a crystal punch bowl, encircled with greenery, and flanked with lighted white tapers in white satin cabbage rose holders nestled in greenery.

Mrs. Paul N. Taylor

Miss Connie Louise Chaney Weds Paul Taylor Saturday

POPLAR BLUFF -- The marriage of Miss Connie Louise Chaney and Paul N. Taylor was solemnized at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night in the First Baptist church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Gilbert before a background composed of lighted white tapers in two branched candelabra and greenery, flanked by spiral candelabra. Centering the arrangement was the prie dieu. Marking the bridal aisle were single candelabra, adorned with greenery.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Chaney of Poplar Bluff, formerly of Sikeston. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Alcorn of Sikeston and the niece of Darrell, Dale, and C. D. Alcorn, all of Sikeston and Delmar Alcorn of Bertrand. Taylor's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Taylor.

Van Chaney, brother of the bride, organist, and Miss Margaret Miller, pianist, played a program of prenuptial music and the traditional wedding marches. Miss Miller also accompanied Chaney as he sang "More" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, Saturday's bride wore a wedding gown of Alencon lace over peau de soie. The long sleeved dress was styled on sheath lines with Empire waistline, accented at the wasitline and around the scooped, scalloped neckline with pearl embroidered motifs of the lace. Her long train of lace over tulle was scalloped and edged with the pearl embroidered motifs of lace. Her bouffant shoulder-length veil of illusion was caught to a pearl outlined flower with the petals filled in with the lace motifs. Her gown and veil were designed and fashioned by the mother. The bride carried a white Bible, crested with an arrangement of white roses.

Miss Joie Morrison, maid of honor, and Miss Carolyn Newkirk, Miss Terry Rounsaville, Poplar Bluff, and Miss Jeannie Studebaker, Hazelwood, bridesmaids, were gowned alike. The moss green velvet boices with Venice lace encircling the Empire waistlines, had elbow-length sleeves, circled with lace and accented with matching ruffles. The long slim skirts were of moss green crepe and each wore matching green accessories. Their headpieces were large moss green velvet cabbage roses and short bouffant veils. The honor attendant carried a crescent bouquet of tangerine color carnations and the bridesmaids carried nosegays of the same flowers. Their gowns and headpiece were also designed and made by Mrs. Chaney.

Miss Tammy McDonald of Sikeston, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and was attired in a long, moss green velvet dress made on the same lines as the adult attendants' and her headpiece was also similar.

Candles were lighted by Denny Alcorn of Sikeston and Alan Kindred of Kennett, cousins of the bride.

Taylor chose Bill O'Connor as his best man and Carol Taylor, his brother, Paul Arnold and Lonnie King as groomsmen. Taylor and Arnold also seated the guests.

Mrs. Chaney selected for her daughter's wedding a two-piece beige lace dress over matching taffeta. The bodice was scalloped at the waistline and sleeves. Her accessories were beige and her corsage was of green cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue dress, trimmed in matching lace, and red accessories. Her corsage was of white cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Carol Taylor, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was at the guest book at a table covered with white satin and tulle, and adorned with a miniature bridal bouquet.

A reception was given in the fellowship room of the church where the bride's table was covered with a long white satin cloth, covered with white tulle caught up with white satin cabbage roses, ferns and white ribbon streamers. The table was graced with a four-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, and a lovely arrangement of white carnations in a silver container. Another table, covered with white satin and tulle, held a crystal punch bowl, encircled with greenery, and flanked with lighted white tapers in white satin cabbage rose holders nestled in greenery.

Mrs. O. C. Cutsinger and Mrs. Jesse Sconce were in charge of the reception and were assisted by Mrs. Jean Russell, Mrs. Detroy Hill and Mrs. Ernest Hammons. Guests were served by Miss Myrna Warren, Miss Susan Walker, Miss Joy Legate, Mrs. David Vick and Miss Vicky and Miss Dianne Taylor, sisters of the bridegroom.

After a honeymoon to an undisclosed destination, Taylor and his bride will live in a new mobile home at the Northwold Trailer Court. For travel the new Mrs. Taylor wore a blue and green three-piece knit suit with matching accessories. Her white rose corsage was from her bridal bouquet.

NEW MAN AND NEW TOGS were unveiled in Kansas City, Mo., by Athletics owner Charles Finley, right. Finley and Allan Sydney Lewis, the "Panamanian Express" from Colon, Panama, look over the white shoes the Athletics will be wearing instead of the usual black during the coming season. Lewis moves up from Leesburg, Fla., where he stole 116 bases in 131 games with the Florida State League.

Swing Along With Ted
by Ted Williams

THREE-HEADED COINS

There are more than two sides to a coin. The HEAD side in the Super Bowl showed that the N.F.L. had all the class, strength and determination. Luck was not involved in the Packers' win. They were simply a great team and they were not about to part with $15,000 to any other team. Add the shopworn phrase of "class always tells" and you have the HEAD side.

The TAIL side grudgingly admits the Packers won. Any of the Chiefs' attempts to use an alibi such as the interception of Dawson's pass or the fact that at half-time the score was still human, 14-10, is only met by laughts from the N.F.L. fans. So goes the TAIL side.

The third side has no name since it comprises many other things, the first being, simply enough, that this was only the first Super Bowl game. One win doesn't really prove anything except for this year. The Packers are the best no matter what. But intangibles always exist. And how many times has the "sure thing" blown apart? The Dodgers four game sweep over the Yanks, the Orioles four game sweep over the Dodgers, Clay's first fight with Liston, etc. The heady smell of victory lasts only until the new season begins and once again everyone is equal. But for now the Packers deserve the accolades and the Chiefs the catcalls. That's the way it goes.

But the third side also contains all those empty seats in the stadium. The television viewing audiences were fantastic and of course no professional sport had the payoff that this game did for the winning athletes. The losers, however, can feel pretty happy with $7,500 to count.

NBC and CBS could both smile in a sense. This was the first time that the fans couldn't get another football game if they switched channels. You had to watch the commercials unless you turned to catch the ending of the 76'ers beating the Celtics.

Talking about "class," the Boston Celtics stand on the verge of losing all the way in the NBA. Unless, of course, as with last year, they beat the 76'ers in the play-offs and that would be a major sport. The NBA hit one sour note in the recent All-Star game when "Red" Auerbach was tossed out for committing two technicals. In a regular game that's one thing, but in the All-Star throw the coach out. Even all the bright talk about the NBA expanding and growing by leaps and bounds will not attract fans when a silly move like tossing out the coach in an All-Star game is made.

Hockey, meanwhile, keeps growing the smart way. In New York alone, the lines of people waiting to buy tickets for the rest of the Ranger home games show that the hockey people are doing the right thing. A winning, fighting team and a decent price for tickets will always bring out the fans.

I'm glad to see that Frank Robinson pulled down his well-deserved $100,000. Salary battles will probably not be as prevalent as in the past, and professional football's high salaries and bonuses may be the reason why many of the top baseball performers will find it easier this year to sign.

BENTON -- The stage is set for Saturday night's finals in both the A and B bracket, of the Scott - Mississippi conference basketball tournament. Oran, Illmo - Scott City, and Scott Central won semi-final round games and advanced into the finals.

Illmo - Scott City posted the first upset of the tournament last night as it toppled second - seeded Delta 39-31 in the B bracket, moving Delta into the consolation bracket where tey will meet Scott Central at 7 p.m. tonight.

The two - semi - final round games in the A bracket saw favored teams advance. Oran swept past Delta 74-49 and Scott Central contained Illmo - Scott City and beat them 48-42.

Tonight's action at the Thomas B. Kelly high school will be in the consolation bracket playoffs as Scott Central and Delta open the night followed by the Delta and Illmo-Scott City varsity playoff at 8:30 p.m.

The Oran Eagles, on their way to defending their tournament title, had an easy time downing the Delta Bobcats as they defensed their way into a 20-6 first quarter lead and held a 30-21 lead at intermission.

Their usual fine defense, rebounding, and out-court shooting pushed the Eagles ahead early in the game. They held it throughout the contest.

Oran's big quarter was its fourth. The Eagles racked up 33-points while Delta hit 20 to account for its large lead at the end of the game.

Without the services of Below and Cook the last four minutes of the fourth quarter, the Bobcats found themselves without their rebound and shooting power, causing them to allow Oran their big quarter. They received their fifth foul and were forced to leave the game.

John and Fred Johnson continued to pace the Eagles in both the scoring and rebound departments. They hit 22 and 17 points respectively and pulled 14 and 18 rebounds respectively.

Jim Below topped the Bobcats scoring, netting six field goals and nine free throws for 21 points.

The second game in which the only tournament upset was scored found Illmo - Scott City jumping out into a 12-5 first quarter lead and controlled the ball and rebounds throughout.

ISC led most of the game but was threatened at the end of the third quarter as Delta closed to within two points--23-25 -- but was never able to overcome the Rams' lead.

Delta found the Rams cold in the third quarter and poured in 11 points while holding ISC to five to close to within five points.

Gibson hit 13 points and Cummins pumped in 11 to lead the Rams to their upset victory.

McIntosh netted 14 points to take high game scoring honors for Delta.

In perhaps the best game of the tournament, the Scott County Central high school Braves made believers out of a few fans as they defeated Illmo-Scott City 48-42 to move into the championship finals.

A 22-point performance by Central's Gary Owens was the spark plug which ignited the Braves flame early in the game.

Scott County Central's win can be attributed to their excellent defense in which they stopped the Rams' Crabtree and held him to 18 points, and good shooting and rebounding.

Jumping into a 15-12 first quarter lead, the Scott Central Braves never trailed in the contest as they held from a two to six-point lead throughout.

Both teams were cold from the floor, but most of that can be attributed to each team's defense. They both played tight defense.

Both teams committed few floor mistakes as Central won on their rebounding power.

Crabtree led the ISC Rams in the scoring column netting 18 points but the Rams Sanford played a good game all the way around as he hit clutch baskets and collected clutch rebounds to keep the Rams in contention.

Owens led Central with 22 points.

Ron Jaynes SPORTS CORNER

Here we are....back again with our little Devil.

Since the first of the year our little...friend...has dropped from 86.7 per cent to 81.3 per cent and he is hoping to improve tonight...but...taking a look at the schedule he has some wonders about that...and the way he's been predicting, we think he will be facing his biggest problem of the year.. tonight's roundball action.

Most of tonight's action is wound around conference play and the two tournaments in our area.

Before we go into tonight's predictions we want to tell a few of you people that this column is designed for enjoyment and is not meant to make fun or to antagonize anyone... so...if you dislike the column or dislike it please let us know so we will know whether to continue it or drop it...

Here are tonight's roundball predictions....

Poplar Bluff at Kennett - We thought earlier in the year that the Indians might knock off the high flying Mules...but the way they have been playing lately we have been wondering...they are capable if any team in the area is...the question is will they play ball and do it?...we think not. Poplar Bluff 53, Kennett 47.

Bell City at Richland - We underestimated the Cubs in their last game...when they played Puxico and we do not plan to do it twice in a row... We think the Cubs will win over the Rebs for the second time this season. Bell City 68, Richland 61.

Parma at Matthews - A New Madrid county conference game that might as well not be played...The Pirates have begun to play ball but not the kind of ball that can beat the wheeling-dealing Pirates. Matthews 82, Parma 66.

Malden at Sikeston - This should be a rather interesting contest...Both teams are well matched and have showed up good in their last two games... Sikeston has the home court advantage and should eke out a rather easy win...But...Malden has been known to be explosive and you just can't hardly tell about them...so...anyway we'll go along with the Bulldogs, Sikeston 64, Malden 58.

Hayti Central at Holcomb - We haven't heard or seen much of Central but if they are anything like Howardville we would take them...but...since we are not sure...we'll take a stab in the dark and say Holcomb, mostly on their past performance. Holcomb 81, Hayti Central 75.

Puxico at Bloomfield - Those Wildcats will have their hands full but we just don't know how to go in this contest...since we are unsure if the Cats big Williamson will be back in the lineup...if he is, there is just not much question but if he's not there, there is a question... We will stick our necks out again and say...Puxico 54, Bloomfield 52.

New Madrid at Fisk - Both teams are having their troubles this season...and...so tonight we will let them both fight it out to see who has got the worst. We think Fisk has the worst trouble and we see the Indians winning over the Pirates. New Madrid 66, Fisk 63.

Clarkton at Hayti North - Those Reindeer are unpredictable if any team has ever been...they will play the sox off of one of the top teams and then get the sox taken off of them by some unrated teams...we just don't know what to think...Hayti North 88, Clarkton 65.

Senath-H'ville at Deering - This should be another one of those games between schools that have been having their troubles. We think Deering has the height and poise to defeat the Lions...Deering 60, Senath-H'ville 53.

South-Pemiscot at Campbell - We sort of crossed our wires last week when we said the southern part of Pemiscot was having their troubles we had the North in mind ...please forgive us Coach Jerry Sinko... We know you have a good record...but what we were thinking about was your loss to the North in the Senath-H'ville tournament...You will have your hands full tonight but since we underrated your team last week we can't possibly do it twice in a row so...South Pemiscot 59, Campbell 54.

Gideon at Portageville - A win by either team means

Cape Indians Seek Revenge

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Southeast Missouri State takes on Western Illinois University here Saturday at 8 p.m., looking for revenge for last year's 84-81 loss on the Western Illinois floor.

In that fracas, the Leathernecks came back from a whopping 51-35 half-time deficit to garner their 3-point win, turning the trick with an aggressive effort that netted 60 rebounds to the 49 of the Indians.

The Western Illinois crew, under veteran coach Leroy Morley, have chalked up a basketball rarity this season, winning only three and losing 10 -- all 10 losses on their own court. Of the three victories, two have been over common opponents with coach Charles Parsley's Indian squad.

Western easily handled Eastern Illinois on the Eastern court, 89-75, and topped Northeast Missouri 66-65. The Indians beat Eastern twice, 86-74 and 73-72, and thumped Kirksville 9--76.

In its last outing, the Indians played flawless ball in burying an outclassed McKendree College team, 135-78. The final score was a team record at Cape, while 6-6 center Kermit Meystedt was also setting a school individual record with 52 points and 24 field goals. Meystedt's effort clipped a mark of 47 points set here in 1961 by all-American Bill Giesing.

Senior guard Curtis Williams -- a 6-8 high-jumper on the track squad despite his 5-11 height -- is second in scoring with 18.7 per game, followed by forward Dan Milligan with 13.0 and playmaker-guard Charlie Bertrand with 12.6.

Cape's record going into Saturday's game stands at 9-2. Western took its 3-10 record into a 2-night tournament at Freeport, Ill., prior to their Cape visit.

Tonight's finals begin at 8 p.m. when Patton and Broseley square off for the championship of the B bracket followed by the 9:30 p.m. meeting of first-seeded Naylor against upset-minded Leopold.

Morris' 17-point production was enough to lead the Tigers to their B bracket victory and into the championship playoffs.

Neelyville's Serratt and Wills 13 points each weren't enough to spare them from their one-point defeat.

Broseley jumped into a 14-6 first quarter lead but slackened the next three points and almost found themselves defeated as Neelyville got hot the last half and outscored their opponents 24-16 but was never able to pull out the victory.

In the biggest upset of the tournament the Leopold quintet, after being down 20-10 at the end of the first quarter, turned on the steam the next three quarters, took the lead at the opening of the fourth quarter and went on to win.

Stan Elfrink's 24 points combined with two other double figure scorers led the Wildcats to their upset victory.

Broseley's Page and Taylor netted 25 and 11 points respectively but found themselves short one double figure man and wnet down to defeat.

Leopold held a six-point lead with five minutes remaining to go in the last five minutes but held on for their slim lead.

EM's New Listener, Advisor

At the end of 1965, Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge had just returned to the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam after being cheered by 70,000 fans during half-time at Legion Field stadium in Birmingham, Ala.

On the last day of 1966, he was cheered by the spectators who lined the streets in Dallas, Tex., to watch him lead the Cotton Bowl Parade as Grand Marshal of the pageant.

The cheers in Birmingham were in response to the military efforts of Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge and the Big Red One Division, which had been adopted by the city during the half-time ceremonies.

The cheers in Dallas stemmed from the new responsibilities the Texas-reared soldier was carrying out after becoming the first Sergeant Major of the Army in July, 1966.

As the senior enlisted advisor and consultant, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge exemplifies the Army approach in giving enlisted leaders a voice in procedures and policies which affect morale, training, pay and promotions.

To carry out his duties, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge has traveled extensively to Army units around the world, brought ideas from the field to the Army Staff, replied to every letter which comes to his Pentagon office, and presided over two sergeants major conferences.

Some of the matters discussed in November at the first Major Command Sergeants Major Conference have been reflected in Department of the Army policies affecting enlisted men.

Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge's accelerated pace of work, his 26-years of experience as a career soldier, his soldierly bearing and firm but pleasant conversational approach have won the respect of the soldiers he has met.

He has accompanied General Johnson on two tours to Vietnam—the last visit was made during Christmas—and one to West Germany. His frequent visits to stateside Army posts include one to Fort Campbell, Ky., with President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Wherever the Sergeant Major of the Army went during his first six months—to the speakers' platform at U. S. Army Association conferences, to the bedsides of wounded soldiers or the training fields at Army posts—he left the impression that he came to listen, advise and seek solutions to any enlisted man's problems. Swing Along With Ted
by Ted Williams

THREE-HEADED COINS

There are more than two sides to a coin. The HEAD side in the Super Bowl showed that the N.F.L. had all the class, strength and determination. Luck was not involved in the Packers' win. They were simply a great team and they were not about to part with $15,000 to any other team. Add the shopworn phrase of "class always tells" and you have the HEAD side.

The TAIL side grudgingly admits the Packers won. Any of the Chiefs' attempts to use an alibi such as the interception of Dawson's pass or the fact that at half-time the score was still human, 14-10, is only met by laughts from the N.F.L. fans. So goes the TAIL side.

The third side has no name since it comprises many other things, the first being, simply enough, that this was only the first Super Bowl game. One win doesn't really prove anything except for this year. The Packers are the best no matter what. But intangibles always exist. And how many times has the "sure thing" blown apart? The Dodgers four game sweep over the Yanks, the Orioles four game sweep over the Dodgers, Clay's first fight with Liston, etc. The heady smell of victory lasts only until the new season begins and once again everyone is equal. But for now the Packers deserve the accolades and the Chiefs the catcalls. That's the way it goes.

But the third side also contains all those empty seats in the stadium. The television viewing audiences were fantastic and of course no professional sport had the payoff that this game did for the winning athletes. The losers, however, can feel pretty happy with $7,500 to count.

NBC and CBS could both smile in a sense. This was the first time that the fans couldn't get another football game if they switched channels. You had to watch the commercials unless you turned to catch the ending of the 76'ers beating the Celtics.

Talking about "class," the Boston Celtics stand on the verge of losing all the way in the NBA. Unless, of course, as with last year, they beat the 76'ers in the play-offs and that would be a major sport. The NBA hit one sour note in the recent All-Star game when "Red" Auerbach was tossed out for committing two technicals. In a regular game that's one thing, but in the All-Star throw the coach out. Even all the bright talk about the NBA expanding and growing by leaps and bounds will not attract fans when a silly move like tossing out the coach in an All-Star game is made.

Hockey, meanwhile, keeps growing the smart way. In New York alone, the lines of people waiting to buy tickets for the rest of the Ranger home games show that the hockey people are doing the right thing. A winning, fighting team and a decent price for tickets will always bring out the fans.

I'm glad to see that Frank Robinson pulled down his well-deserved $100,000. Salary battles will probably not be as prevalent as in the past, and professional football's high salaries and bonuses may be the reason why many of the top baseball performers will find it easier this year to sign.

Neelyville's Serratt and Wills 13 points each weren't enough to spare them from their one-point defeat.

Broseley jumped into a 14-6 first quarter lead but slackened the next three points and almost found themselves defeated as Neelyville got hot the last half and outscored their opponents 24-16 but was never able to pull out the victory.

In the biggest upset of the tournament the Leopold quintet, after being down 20-10 at the end of the first quarter, turned on the steam the next three quarters, took the lead at the opening of the fourth quarter and went on to win.

Stan Elfrink's 24 points combined with two other double figure scorers led the Wildcats to their upset victory.

Broseley's Page and Taylor netted 25 and 11 points respectively but found themselves short one double figure man and wnet down to defeat.

Leopold held a six-point lead with five minutes remaining to go in the last five minutes but held on for their slim lead.

Ron Jaynes SPORTS CORNER

Here we are....back again with our little Devil.

Since the first of the year our little...friend...has dropped from 86.7 per cent to 81.3 per cent and he is hoping to improve tonight...but...taking a look at the schedule he has some wonders about that...and the way he's been predicting, we think he will be facing his biggest problem of the year.. tonight's roundball action.

Most of tonight's action is wound around conference play and the two tournaments in our area.

Before we go into tonight's predictions we want to tell a few of you people that this column is designed for enjoyment and is not meant to make fun or to antagonize anyone... so...if you dislike the column or dislike it please let us know so we will know whether to continue it or drop it...

Here are tonight's roundball predictions....

Poplar Bluff at Kennett - We thought earlier in the year that the Indians might knock off the high flying Mules...but the way they have been playing lately we have been wondering...they are capable if any team in the area is...the question is will they play ball and do it?...we think not. Poplar Bluff 53, Kennett 47.

Bell City at Richland - We underestimated the Cubs in their last game...when they played Puxico and we do not plan to do it twice in a row... We think the Cubs will win over the Rebs for the second time this season. Bell City 68, Richland 61.

Parma at Matthews - A New Madrid county conference game that might as well not be played...The Pirates have begun to play ball but not the kind of ball that can beat the wheeling-dealing Pirates. Matthews 82, Parma 66.

Malden at Sikeston - This should be a rather interesting contest...Both teams are well matched and have showed up good in their last two games... Sikeston has the home court advantage and should eke out a rather easy win...But...Malden has been known to be explosive and you just can't hardly tell about them...so...anyway we'll go along with the Bulldogs, Sikeston 64, Malden 58.

Hayti Central at Holcomb - We haven't heard or seen much of Central but if they are anything like Howardville we would take them...but...since we are not sure...we'll take a stab in the dark and say Holcomb, mostly on their past performance. Holcomb 81, Hayti Central 75.

Puxico at Bloomfield - Those Wildcats will have their hands full but we just don't know how to go in this contest...since we are unsure if the Cats big Williamson will be back in the lineup...if he is, there is just not much question but if he's not there, there is a question... We will stick our necks out again and say...Puxico 54, Bloomfield 52.

New Madrid at Fisk - Both teams are having their troubles this season...and...so tonight we will let them both fight it out to see who has got the worst. We think Fisk has the worst trouble and we see the Indians winning over the Pirates. New Madrid 66, Fisk 63.

Clarkton at Hayti North - Those Reindeer are unpredictable if any team has ever been...they will play the sox off of one of the top teams and then get the sox taken off of them by some unrated teams...we just don't know what to think...Hayti North 88, Clarkton 65.

Senath-H'ville at Deering - This should be another one of those games between schools that have been having their troubles. We think Deering has the height and poise to defeat the Lions...Deering 60, Senath-H'ville 53.

South-Pemiscot at Campbell - We sort of crossed our wires last week when we said the southern part of Pemiscot was having their troubles we had the North in mind ...please forgive us Coach Jerry Sinko... We know you have a good record...but what we were thinking about was your loss to the North in the Senath-H'ville tournament...You will have your hands full tonight but since we underrated your team last week we can't possibly do it twice in a row so...South Pemiscot 59, Campbell 54.

Gideon at Portageville - A win by either team means

EM's New Listener, Advisor

At the end of 1965, Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge had just returned to the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam after being cheered by 70,000 fans during half-time at Legion Field stadium in Birmingham, Ala.

On the last day of 1966, he was cheered by the spectators who lined the streets in Dallas, Tex., to watch him lead the Cotton Bowl Parade as Grand Marshal of the pageant.

The cheers in Birmingham were in response to the military efforts of Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge and the Big Red One Division, which had been adopted by the city during the half-time ceremonies.

The cheers in Dallas stemmed from the new responsibilities the Texas-reared soldier was carrying out after becoming the first Sergeant Major of the Army in July, 1966.

As the senior enlisted advisor and consultant, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge exemplifies the Army approach in giving enlisted leaders a voice in procedures and policies which affect morale, training, pay and promotions.

To carry out his duties, Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge has traveled extensively to Army units around the world, brought ideas from the field to the Army Staff, replied to every letter which comes to his Pentagon office, and presided over two sergeants major conferences.

Some of the matters discussed in November at the first Major Command Sergeants Major Conference have been reflected in Department of the Army policies affecting enlisted men.

Sgt. Maj. Wooldridge's accelerated pace of work, his 26-years of experience as a career soldier, his soldierly bearing and firm but pleasant conversational approach have won the respect of the soldiers he has met.

He has accompanied General Johnson on two tours to Vietnam—the last visit was made during Christmas—and one to West Germany. His frequent visits to stateside Army posts include one to Fort Campbell, Ky., with President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Wherever the Sergeant Major of the Army went during his first six months—to the speakers' platform at U. S. Army Association conferences, to the bedsides of wounded soldiers or the training fields at Army posts—he left the impression that he came to listen, advise and seek solutions to any enlisted man's problems. The Right to Refrain

How and Why The Advocates of Compulsory Unionism Were Beaten in 1965.

By REED LARSON

THE INCONSISTENCIES

The magnitude of political pressures brought to bear on members of Congress in the drive for repeal is illustrated by the many seeming contradictions on the part of those advocating repeal. Taking a stand to pay off campaign debts may make sense politically, but it sometimes leads to the wildest anomalies as far as logic and common sense are concerned. Because the nature of the 14 (b) battle is revealed by those contradictions, let me enumerate a few:

1. The President of the U.S. as a Congressman and as a Senator had supported Taft-Hartley and 14 (b). In his twelve years in Congress, Lyndon Johnson had never proposed any change in 14 (b). In fact, when running for re-election to the Senate LBJ said, "I have never sought nor do I seek now the support of any labor bosses dictating to free men anywhere, anytime." Yet, as President, he pushed this highly disruptive move to strike down laws and constitutional amendments in 19 states, in the name of promoting harmony.

2. Congressman Frank Thompson (D-N. J.) sponsor of the 14 (b) repeal bill in the House, poses as a "liberal" and a friend of the working man; yet he denounced rank and file union members as "skills" and "soreheads" simply because they had the courage to publicly oppose his bill legalizing compulsory unionism in every state.

3. Senator Pat McNamara, (D-Mich.), sponsor of the 14 (b) repeal bill in the Senate, is a former union official and claims to represent the interests of laboring people; yet, as chairman of the Labor Subcommittee conducting hearings on his bill, he flatly rejected the pleas of hundreds of working men and women who asked him for a chance to speak against his bill. Instead, his "bobtailed" hearings heard testimony of top union professionals whose primary interest is seeing that workers are forced to pay them dues in order to keep their jobs.

4. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, masquerading as a spokesman for the working man, asked Congress to repeal 14 (b) on the grounds that employers should be free to make agreements with union officials, forcing workers into unions against their will.

5. Attorney General Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach is supposedly the nation's watchdog against violations of federal law; yet he failed to investigate widely-published reports quoting a Democratic candidate for Congress as having been offered $10,000 by AFL-CIO for a pledge that he would support repeal of 14 (b). Such an offer, if true, would flagrantly violate the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

6. Professional spokesmen for the civil rights movement, dedicated to protection of minority rights, told Congress they were more anxious to repeal 14 (b), thus striking down laws which protect workers from discrimination because of union membership or non-membership, than they were to obtain additional legislation to limit discrimination practiced by unions against minority groups.

7. Professional spokesmen for several major religious groups told Congress that, while they were interested in legislation to protect the rights of religious objectors from forced unionism, they did not want consideration of such proposals to delay action on nullifying all state laws against forced union membership.

8. Members of the House who seek most vigorously to identify themselves as "liberals" opposed a House ruling for 14 (b) debate under which consideration could be given to the protection of civil liberties violated by compulsory unionism. Representative Edith Green (D-Ore.). who rarely deviated from 100 per cent support of union legislative objectives, was quoted as saying of her proposal for protecting religious objectors, "I am certain it would have passed the House if labor had allowed a vote."

The examples are endless. Political expediency makes strange bedfellows. However, the one fact of political life that cannot be overlooked is this: No matter how strong the political headlock which any group claims to have on government, it can be broken by an aroused public.

THE NEXT STEPS

The conclusion, let me speculate briefly on what we see for the future.

First. The drive for repeal will be renewed early in the next session. President Johnson and the union lobby have no choice. However, we believe the opposition to repeal will be even stronger and more enthusiastic. If the Administration forces a lengthy resumption of the "extended debate," it will further stimulate public opinion against repeal. The razor-thin edge which unions claim in the Senate on the repeal issue itself has already suffered marked attrition. Resumption of debate in the Senate next year could lead to a solid majority against repeal if and when the issue comes to a vote.

Second. The issue of Right To Work has now been permanently and properly dislodged from alignment with any "liberal" or "conservative" philosophy. It now stands on its own feet. Whereas, in the past, opposition to Right To Work was too often considered part of the package position of doctrinaire "liberals," the experience of the past year has disclosed so many inconsistencies in that position that more and more classic liberals are lining up on the side of voluntarism in union membership.

Third. The public debate over 14 (b) and defeat of repeal will set the stage for numerous new state drives for Right To Work laws.

Fourth. We have moved much nearer the day when serious consideration will be given to a national ban on compulsory unionism. Such a law will give substance to the present hypocritical statement of intent in Taft-Hartley which says: "Employees shall have the right to self organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the right to refrain from any or all such activities EXCEPT. . ."

We believe the people of the nation will soon demand the removal of that exception which negates all employee rights under the heel of compulsory unionism.

Drew Pearson Special

DREW PEARSON SAYS: Venezuela builds world's largest power dam; American contractors run into snags; Snafu could sour U.S.-Venezuelan relations.

GURI, VENEZUELA -- About 800 miles from the equator in an area where jaguars and monkeys once roamed, American contractors are building what may be the world's largest power dam.

It should surpass the giant Krasnoyarsk dam in Siberia and will be larger than the present Grand Coulee dam in Washington State, though the interior department has just announced plans to increase Grand Coulee.

Generating six million kilowatts when all three phases of the dam are finished, Guri will supply cheap power as far away as Brazil, Trinidad and Colombia. More important, it will supply power to the City of Caracas and to the steel and aluminum mills developing in Guayana, an area being established as the Ruhr of Venezuela.

This is where U. S. Steel has located a mountain of pure iron ore and sends seagoing ore boats daily down the Orinoco to its Newton, Pa., mill on the banks of the Delaware; and where Bethlehem Steel also loads ore boats to sail up Chesapeak Bay to its plan at Sparrows Point, Md.

It's a Pan American economic complex almost as important as the Pan American Union.

This area is also where the Venezuelan government has located its state-owned steel mill, has gone into partnership with Reynolds metals in building an aluminum plant.

Guayana is as large as Italy, but has a population of less than a million against Italy's 58 million.

When all three stages of the Guri Dam are finished, it will have three times the power of the Aswan Dam. Having gone to Egypt for the dedication of Aswan, I went to the Interior of Venezuela to look at Guri.

The Caroni River on which it is located has the power of the Niagara River -- smaller but just as beautiful. It rushes and gushes, falls and froths through the jungle in a series of mighty cascades. No man, you think as you watch its power and beauty, could ever harness that torrent.

But a huge concrete wall, towering 300 feet from the river bed, is ready to do just that. When completed, and when this water is turned against that concrete wall, it will back up to form a lake covering almost 700,000 acres.

It's an international project, with Westinghouse supplying the generators, Krupp supplying the Spillway Gates, Ansaldo of Italy the Intake Gates, Alshom of France the Transformers; Itachi of Japan the Turbines, Nippon Crane supplying the Cranes, and ASEA of Sweden supplying the Switch Gear.

UNEXPECTED COSTS

The funds, originally estimated at $81 million, have been put up by the World Bank, and the consortium which is doing the work is composed of Kaiser engineers, 37 per cent; Macco International of California, 24 per cent; Tecon International of Dallas, 19 per cent; Merritt-Chapman and Scott Overseas of New York, 10 per cent, with Compania Anonima De Construcciones, a Venezuelan firm, and Christiani and Nielsen, a Danish firm, carrying the balance.

However, the project has run into a series of obstacles. Chief problem has been borings to sample the rock foundation of the dam. These were undertaken by the Harza Engineering Company of Chicago on behalf of both the World Bank and Venezuela and they showed hard, not soft, rock. However, the contractors have discovered a soft rock foundation which has required them to excavate 30 feet deeper than expected, a time-consuming and expensive process.

Three thousand men were repeatedly kept idle while borings were inspected, the facts sent to Caracas for a decision, then the work shifted. As a result costs rose to a point that the smaller Danish partner in the Consortium went bankrupt, and has offered to sell its $1,500,000 assets to Kaiser for one dollar.

Total loss on the contract has now run into $46 million over and above the $181 million contract price. Edgar Kaiser is reported selling personal assets in his companies to meet the payroll.

The consortium has appealed to the Venezuelan government for relief on the ground that it and its engineers, not the contractors, were responsible for the originaly faulty borings.

The matter was referred to a committee of experts by a Venezuelan court, and the experts have concluded: "During the excavations and explorations subsequent to the bidding, it was determined that the rock conditions of the subsurface were not in all cases the same as those indicated in the bid documents and in several occasions it was necessary to deepen the excavations in order to reach the required conditions for the foundations of the project's works."

The three experts, Jesus A. Yanes, Frank A. Nickell and Victor M. Lopez, also found that "as a result of having performed a much larger excavation than the one anticipated in the contract documents, normally a longer period of time to execute the job is required."

However, they said nothing about additional costs, and the additional cost has run into such high figures that a decision is expected this month as to whether more money will be forthcoming or the American firms be relieved of their contract.

The decision is now before Gen. Rafael Alfonzo-Rafard, a graduate of Massachusetts Tech, and head of the CVG Authority.

Both sides appear to be sincere, scrupulously honest, and are trying to iron out their differences without recrimination. Some criticism has been made that Kaiser, who was in charge of the work, changed the project manager four times and that this caused delays. On the other hand, there have been language difficultues, and the problem of keeping men in isolated work camps for almost three years.

The situation is serious both as to reglations between the United States and Venezuela, hitherto excellent, and the future economy of the country. The city of Caracas is scheduled to change the cycle of its electric power in September, based on its receipt of power from the Guri Dam. The power lines have been constructed. Everything is ready to make the change -- except that the dam has not been completed. And the contractors, already $46 million in the red, indicate they may not be able to proceed unless they get financial help to meet their deficit and their almost $1 million monthly payroll.

Soybean Day Set Jan. 31

PORTAGEVILLE -- The soybean, Missouri's leading cash crop and the No. 1 crop in the Bootheel in 1966, will be in the spotlight Jan. 31 at the University of Missouri Delta Center.

This is Soybean Day for growers, processors, buyers and anyone else interested in soybeans.

The meeting is sponsored by the Missouri Soybean association in cooperation with the University of Missouri. Norman Brown, superintendent of the Delta Center will start off the program at 9:30 a.m. when he welcomes guests.

Aline Avery of New Madrid, president of the Missouri Soybean association, will preside. Avery will appear on the program to tell how his organization has contributed to the expansion of soybeans -- a 200 million bushel crop at the end of World War II to nearly a billion bushel crop in the United States in 1966.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist, will serve as moderator of a panel who will discuss improved production practices based on research programs conducted at the Delta Center. First on the panel will be Dr. Leo Duclos, research geneticist in field crops, who will discuss "Soybean Breeding and New Varieties," followed by John Garrett, area soils agent, whose topic will be "Soybean Response to Fertilizer in Southeast Missouri." "Soybean Weed Control" will be presented by Donald Lloyd, weed control technician at the Delta Center, and E. B. Nace, area farm management agent, will wind up the morning program with "Irrigation and Double Cropping of Soybeans."

Lunch will be served at noon. Representatives of chemical companies will appear on the afternoon program to present and broadleaf weeds in soybeans. W. J. James, area agriculture agent of Pemiscot and Dunklin Counties, will be panel moderator.

Soybean growers will have an opportunity to ask questions concerning the use of herbicides and other soybean production methods. Soybean growers are expected from Butler, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Pemiscot, Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott and Stoddard Counties.

Dairymen Eye Stability in Milk Prices

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dairymen in the Midwest and Southwest want to see greater stability in producer and consumer prices of bottling milk.

Under federal milk marketing orders, minimum producer prices as established to assure consumers adequate supplies and producer adequate returns. But both producer and retail prices fluctuate during the year in relation to ups and downs in milk production.

Dairymen supplying 32 federal milk marketing order areas in Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin will present arguments for elimination of the seasonal changes in prices at an Agriculture Department hearing in Kansas City Jan. 26.

Under the pricing systems, producer prices tend to go down during the spring and early summer season of flush production and to go up during fall and winter seasons of lower production.

These changes in producer prices often make it necessary for retail prices to be changed.

What the dairymen would like to see is a price system that would give producers a uniform price through the year which would reflect the current seasonal reductions and advances in producer prices.

In 1966 for example, producer prices for Class I fluid or bottling milk in 165 American milk markets ranged from an average of $5.60 to $6.19 a hundred pounds. This was a variation equivalent to a little more than a cent a quart in the wholesale price. Retail prices for home-delivered milk ranged from an average of 28.9 to 31 cents a quart during 1966.

Soil and Plant Course Offered

A soils and plant nutrition short course will be taught at the high school during January and February.

The course will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each Thursday for five weeks. The instructor will be John D. Garrett, extension area soils specialist. E. B. Nace, farm management, will conduct one session. Both are from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville.

An outline of the short course:

7:30 p.m. Thursday -- Physical and chemical properties of soils, with a discussion of exchange capacity.

Feb. 2 -- Organic matter, soil phosprous and hydrogen.

Feb. 9 -- Limestone, nitrogen and nitrogen fertilizers.

Feb. 16 -- Soil and fertilizer -- phosphorus and potassium, economies of lime and fertilizer use.

Feb. 23 -- Micro-nutrients and soil testing film -- summary and questions.

Course brochures and enrollment forms may be obtained from the University Extension Centers in Benton, Bloomfield, Charleston and New Madrid.

Farm Management Trio Departs

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- A three-man farm management team left Thursday for Bhubaneswar, India, where the members will spend two years on a program to increase food grain production.

Heading the group, which is sponsored by the University of Missouri, is J. Parker Rodgers, who was Boone County extension director until Novenber 1, 1965 when he took a leave of absence.

With him are John Falloon, leader of the university extension soils project since 1952, and William E. Yates, Macon, who has been Macon County extension agent since 1952.

They will be joined Feb. 1 by Frank D. Miller, Chillicothe, who has been Livingston County extension director since 1947.

With them on the two-year stay will be their families.

They will take part in the Agricultural Production Promotion Program to increase food production in the Indian state of Orissa.

In my book about my White House years, I must mention my good friend Dean Rusk. I know he'll get a kick out of it.

THE NEXT STEPS

The conclusion, let me speculate briefly on what we see for the future.

First. The drive for repeal will be renewed early in the next session. President Johnson and the union lobby have no choice. However, we believe the opposition to repeal will be even stronger and more enthusiastic. If the Administration forces a lengthy resumption of the "extended debate," it will further stimulate public opinion against repeal. The razor-thin edge which unions claim in the Senate on the repeal issue itself has already suffered marked attrition. Resumption of debate in the Senate next year could lead to a solid majority against repeal if and when the issue comes to a vote.

Second. The issue of Right To Work has now been permanently and properly dislodged from alignment with any "liberal" or "conservative" philosophy. It now stands on its own feet. Whereas, in the past, opposition to Right To Work was too often considered part of the package position of doctrinaire "liberals," the experience of the past year has disclosed so many inconsistencies in that position that more and more classic liberals are lining up on the side of voluntarism in union membership.

Third. The public debate over 14 (b) and defeat of repeal will set the stage for numerous new state drives for Right To Work laws.

Fourth. We have moved much nearer the day when serious consideration will be given to a national ban on compulsory unionism. Such a law will give substance to the present hypocritical statement of intent in Taft-Hartley which says: "Employees shall have the right to self organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the right to refrain from any or all such activities EXCEPT. . ."

We believe the people of the nation will soon demand the removal of that exception which negates all employee rights under the heel of compulsory unionism.

DREW PEARSON SAYS: Venezuela builds world's largest power dam; American contractors run into snags; Snafu could sour U.S.-Venezuelan relations.

GURI, VENEZUELA -- About 800 miles from the equator in an area where jaguars and monkeys once roamed, American contractors are building what may be the world's largest power dam.

It should surpass the giant Krasnoyarsk dam in Siberia and will be larger than the present Grand Coulee dam in Washington State, though the interior department has just announced plans to increase Grand Coulee.

Generating six million kilowatts when all three phases of the dam are finished, Guri will supply cheap power as far away as Brazil, Trinidad and Colombia. More important, it will supply power to the City of Caracas and to the steel and aluminum mills developing in Guayana, an area being established as the Ruhr of Venezuela.

This is where U.S. Steel has located a mountain of pure iron ore and sends sea-going ore boats daily down the Orinoco to its Newton, Pa., mill on the banks of the Delaware; and where Bethlehem Steel also loads ore boats to sail up Chesapeak Bay to its plan at Sparrows Point, Md.

It's a Pan American economic complex almost as important as the Pan American Union.

This area is also where the Venezuelan government has located its state-owned steel mill, has gone into partnership with Reynolds metals in building an aluminum plant.

Guayana is as large as Italy, but has a population of less than a million against Italy's 58 million.

When all three stages of the Guri Dam are finished, it will have three times the power of the Aswan Dam. Having gone to Egypt for the dedication of Aswan, I went to the Interior of Venezuela to look at Guri.

The Caroni River on which it is located has the power of the Niagara River -- smaller but just as beautiful. It rushes and gushes, falls and froths through the jungle in a series of mighty cascades. No man, you think as you watch its power and beauty, could ever harness that torrent.

But a huge concrete wall, towering 300 feet from the river bed, is ready to do just that. When completed, and when this water is turned against that concrete wall, it will back up to form a lake covering almost 700,000 acres.

It's an international project, with Westinghouse supplying the generators, Krupp supplying the Spillway Gates, Ansaldo of Italy the Intake Gates, Alshom of France the Transformers; Itachi of Japan the Turbines, Nippon Crane supplying the Cranes, and ASEA of Sweden supplying the Switch Gear.

UNEXPECTED COSTS

The funds, originally estimated at $81 million, have been put up by the World Bank, and the consortium which is doing the work is composed of Kaiser engineers, 37 per cent; Macco International of California, 24 per cent; Tecon International of Dallas, 19 per cent; Merritt-Chapman and Scott Overseas of New York, 10 per cent, with Compania Anonima De Construcciones, a Venezuelan firm, and Christiani and Nielsen, a Danish firm, carrying the balance.

However, the project has run into a series of obstacles. Chief problem has been borings to sample the rock foundation of the dam. These were undertaken by the Harza Engineering Company of Chicago on behalf of both the World Bank and Venezuela and they showed hard, not soft, rock. However, the contractors have discovered a soft rock foundation which has required them to excavate 30 feet deeper than expected, a time-consuming and expensive process.

Three thousand men were repeatedly kept idle while borings were inspected, the facts sent to Caracas for a decision, then the work shifted. As a result costs rose to a point that the smaller Danish partner in the Consortium went bankrupt, and has offered to sell its $1,500,000 assets to Kaiser for one dollar.

Total loss on the contract has now run into $46 million over and above the $181 million contract price. Edgar Kaiser is reported selling personal assets in his companies to meet the payroll.

The consortium has appealed to the Venezuelan government for relief on the ground that it and its engineers, not the contractors, were responsible for the originaly faulty borings.

The matter was referred to a committee of experts by a Venezuelan court, and the experts have concluded: "During the excavations and explorations subsequent to the bidding, it was determined that the rock conditions of the subsurface were not in all cases the same as those indicated in the bid documents and in several occasions it was necessary to deepen the excavations in order to reach the required conditions for the foundations of the project's works."

The three experts, Jesus A. Yanes, Frank A. Nickell and Victor M. Lopez, also found that "as a result of having performed a much larger excavation than the one anticipated in the contract documents, normally a longer period of time to execute the job is required."

However, they said nothing about additional costs, and the additional cost has run into such high figures that a decision is expected this month as to whether more money will be forthcoming or the American firms be relieved of their contract.

The decision is now before Gen. Rafael Alfonzo-Rafard, a graduate of Massachusetts Tech, and head of the CVG Authority.

Both sides appear to be sincere, scrupulously honest, and are trying to iron out their differences without recrimination. Some criticism has been made that Kaiser, who was in charge of the work, changed the project manager four times and that this caused delays. On the other hand, there have been language difficultues, and the problem of keeping men in isolated work camps for almost three years.

The situation is serious both as to reglations between the United States and Venezuela, hitherto excellent, and the future economy of the country. The city of Caracas is scheduled to change the cycle of its electric power in September, based on its receipt of power from the Guri Dam. The power lines have been constructed. Everything is ready to make the change -- except that the dam has not been completed. And the contractors, already $46 million in the red, indicate they may not be able to proceed unless they get financial help to meet their deficit and their almost $1 million monthly payroll.

Soybean Day Set Jan. 31

PORTAGEVILLE -- The soybean, Missouri's leading cash crop and the No. 1 crop in the Bootheel in 1966, will be in the spotlight Jan. 31 at the University of Missouri Delta Center.

This is Soybean Day for growers, processors, buyers and anyone else interested in soybeans.

The meeting is sponsored by the Missouri Soybean association in cooperation with the University of Missouri. Norman Brown, superintendent of the Delta Center will start off the program at 9:30 a.m. when he welcomes guests.

Aline Avery of New Madrid, president of the Missouri Soybean association, will preside. Avery will appear on the program to tell how his organization has contributed to the expansion of soybeans -- a 200 million bushel crop at the end of World War II to nearly a billion bushel crop in the United States in 1966.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist, will serve as moderator of a panel who will discuss improved production practices based on research programs conducted at the Delta Center. First on the panel will be Dr. Leo Duclos, research geneticist in field crops, who will discuss "Soybean Breeding and New Varieties," followed by John Garrett, area soils agent, whose topic will be "Soybean Response to Fertilizer in Southeast Missouri." "Soybean Weed Control" will be presented by Donald Lloyd, weed control technician at the Delta Center, and E. B. Nace, area farm management agent, will wind up the morning program with "Irrigation and Double Cropping of Soybeans."

Lunch will be served at noon. Representatives of chemical companies will appear on the afternoon program to present and broadleaf weeds in soybeans. W. J. James, area agriculture agent of Pemiscot and Dunklin Counties, will be panel moderator.

Soybean growers will have an opportunity to ask questions concerning the use of herbicides and other soybean production methods. Soybean growers are expected from Butler, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Pemiscot, Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott and Stoddard Counties.

Dairymen Eye Stability in Milk Prices

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dairymen in the Midwest and Southwest want to see greater stability in producer and consumer prices of bottling milk.

Under federal milk marketing orders, minimum producer prices as established to assure consumers adequate supplies and producer adequate returns. But both producer and retail prices fluctuate during the year in relation to ups and downs in milk production.

Dairymen supplying 32 federal milk marketing order areas in Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin will present arguments for elimination of the seasonal changes in prices at an Agriculture Department hearing in Kansas City Jan. 26.

Under the pricing systems, producer prices tend to go down during the spring and early summer season of flush production and to go up during fall and winter seasons of lower production.

These changes in producer prices often make it necessary for retail prices to be changed.

What the dairymen would like to see is a price system that would give producers a uniform price through the year which would reflect the current seasonal reductions and advances in producer prices.

In 1966 for example, producer prices for Class I fluid or bottling milk in 165 American milk markets ranged from an average of $5.60 to $6.19 a hundred pounds. This was a variation equivalent to a little more than a cent a quart in the wholesale price. Retail prices for home-delivered milk ranged from an average of 28.9 to 31 cents a quart during 1966.

Soil and Plant Course Offered

A soils and plant nutrition short course will be taught at the high school during January and February.

Feb. 2 -- Organic matter, soil phosprous and hydrogen.

Feb. 9 -- Limestone, nitrogen and nitrogen fertilizers.

Feb. 16 -- Soil and fertilizer -- phosphorus and potassium, economies of lime and fertilizer use.

Feb. 23 -- Micro-nutrients and soil testing film -- summary and questions.

Course brochures and enrollment forms may be obtained from the University Extension Centers in Benton, Bloomfield, Charleston and New Madrid.

Farm Management Trio Departs

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- A three-man farm management team left Thursday for Bhubaneswar, India, where the members will spend two years on a program to increase food grain production.

Heading the group, which is sponsored by the University of Missouri, is J. Parker Rodgers, who was Boone County extension director until Novenber 1, 1965 when he took a leave of absence.

With him are John Falloon, leader of the university extension soils project since 1952, and William E. Yates, Macon, who has been Macon County extension agent since 1952.

They will be joined Feb. 1 by Frank D. Miller, Chillicothe, who has been Livingston County extension director since 1947.

With them on the two-year stay will be their families.

They will take part in the Agricultural Production Promotion Program to increase food production in the Indian state of Orissa.

In my book about my White House years, I must mention my good friend Dean Rusk. I know he'll get a kick out of it.

Owner Says Blarney Stone Not for Sale or for Hire

By EDDY GILMORE

BLARNEY, Ireland (AP) — "Neither the Blarney Stone nor any part of it is going to America or to any other place," said its owner. "But the people do still try to buy it."

Who tries to buy it?

"Americans mostly," replied Mary Penelope Hillyard, who inherited ancient Blarney Castle and its world-famous stone in 1952.

Americans?

"Oh, yes. Someone is always walking up here to the new castle and trying to buy it. When they find they can't get it, then they try to settle by buying our dog Kelly, or one like him."

Kelly is a tremendous Irish wolfhound who looks almost as Irish as the stone which is supposed to give those who kiss it the gift of gab. For at least 50 years, Americans have been trying to buy the stone, or chunks of it.

In 1949, John P. Hewlitt, who was born in Atlanta, Ga., actually announced he had negotiated to have it flown to the United States and taken on a nationwide tour, with proceeds going to charity.

But Sir George Colhurst, the the owner, said there had been a misunderstanding and the stone would never leave the castle for the United States or elsewhere, "because I doubt if I'd ever get it back."

After that Sir George wrote in his will: "It is my desire that as far as I can prevent it, the said stone, or any part of it, shall never be sold or removed from the old castle at Blarney."

The Blarney Stone is at old Blarney Castle. Mrs. Hillyard and her husband, Maj. Jack Hillyard, a retired British army officer, live at new Blarney Castle, a gray stone building about 100 years old and a quarter - mile from the old castle.

The Blarney Stone is one of the world's best known objects. People come by the thousands to kiss it, which is something of a gymnastic trick.

In 1805, a book "Stranger in Ireland," carried this note:

"About four miles before we reached Cork on our left, my fair companion du voyage pointed out Blarney Castle with its turret. It is recorded that there is a stone there very nearly inaccessible which it is stated possesses the rare virtue of making those very happy who touch it."

In those days kissing the Blarney Stone was dangerous, for the would-be kisser had to be suspended head downward from the battlements, with a strong man holding his ankles — in order to get his lips on the stone. Should the holder let go, the fall is about 125 feet.

After a man was killed at the old castle, kissing the stone was made easier — and safer.

Two vertical bars now extend inside the battlements, straight down to the stone. By sitting down and leaning backwards, while holding to the vertical bars, a fairly agile person can easily plant his lips on the stone.

"I've done it many times with no one holding me," said Mrs. Hillyard "It's not hard.

The best offer the owner has ever received for the Blarney Stone-4-foot by 1-inch long, by 1-foot 1-inch wide, and 9-inches thick — is $280,000.

"A lot of money," she said, "but still — no sale."

In 1949 a medical officer, Dr. L. C. Geiger from San Francisco, took one look at the Blarney Stone and was reported as commenting: "It's unhygienic. Over the centuries germs must have been planted on it in layers."

The owner pooh-poohs this suggestion.

"It's regularly cleaned," she said, "but even if it wasn't, just look at the rain."

Where did the Blarney Stone come from? The legends are numerous. One is that it was Jacob's pillow and was brought to Ireland during one of the Crusades.

Another is that the stone came from part of a Druids circle near the castle.

A considerably believed theory is that the stone came from Scotland as a gift from Robert the Bruce. After the Battle of Bannockburn, in grateful appreciation of Irish aid, the great Bruce sent the Blarney Stone and it was stuck on the battlement.

Now Gals Wear the Shirts

By HELEN HENNESSY
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Apart from the big noise over miniskirts there's a shirt making big news in Paris right now. It's a lady's shirt, tailored with traditional men's button-down collar and it's being worn by all the French gals who originate so much of the sportswear fashion news.

The poor boy sweater was their most recent export of note to the American scene and all we have to do is count how many we see here now to realize how important such a trend can become. If we follow the direction indicated at this moment shirts may well be the poor boys' successors.

In thinking of shirts we tend to visualize men's classics. Yet there's a whole new realm of shirt design developing. Imaginatively designed women's shirts, not to be confused with blouses, are being made by several traditional men's shirtmakers. Quality is essential and fabric excellence a prime factor. Many of the finest new shirts are in fabrics containing Avril rayon.

Avril rayon is absorbent, which spells comfort for the wearer, yet it offers all the desirable easy-care qualities of synthetic fibers.

Shirtmakers who have been catering to the demanding tastes of quality-conscious men for years bring excellent experience to women's wear. They know that a good shirt can be the staple of a wardrobe and that it will receive lots of wear and laundering. In addition to their fine workmanship, they now give us fashion news as well as quality in the fabrics they choose for women's shirts. There are crinkle textures, for example, all manner of thick and thin stripes, plus floral prints in splurges of intense color.

ONE CHIC NEW WAY TO WEAR a pantsuit is with a precisely tailored shirt massed with deep red, gold and white flowers. Lady Arrow's choice (left) is a blend of Avril rayon and cotton in durable press. Avril rayon and polyster are blended in the striped fabric (right) in earth brown and white. A granddad style but by Gant Shirtmakers, this shirt shows its Victorian heritage with proper white collar and cuffs.

WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME?

It echoes in our hearts, Christ's anguished cry,
Piercing to the depths, as in that hour
It battered a bleak, unrelenting sky
And left the Saviour bound in mortal power.
For have we not, in lesser measure, known
The terror of the orphaned, understood
How pain can rasp the soul? We've felt our own
Forsakenness in grief, shared doubts that good
Might come of such sore tests, Yet when storms beat
Against us, in rebellion we have railed
As if it were some undeserving mete
And we, the chosen, must not be assailed,
Forgetting how God works His miracle
On trusting souls, surrendered to His will.

by JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The upward thrust of the 1967 stock market, following sharply an 11-month decline, is surprising some cynics who feel that the new mood is superficial-motivated merely by the flipping of a calendar page.

January traditionally has been a month of increases, a time when traders reinvest their yearend dividends or bonuses -- or cash from tax-loss selling.

This year the gloomy sellers of late December have become the hopeful buyers of early January, doing an about-face in perfect step with the calendar.

The prices of stocks fell on average in 10 of the 12 months of 1966. Now, since the turn of the year, almost every day has produced increases in values, sometimes accompanied by very heavy trading.

There is no assurance, of course, that this will continue. Some large investment advisers are, in fact, encouraging subscribers to increase their reserves, to bide their time and watch and wait.

There are some factors in the latest advance that are easy to understand. Since there was a real plunge in stock prices last year there was much selling in December to establish losses for deduction on 1966 income tax payments. Some of this money is now returning to the market.

In addition, a lot of bears came out of the woods in that month. Short interest rose to a record high of 14.6 million shares Dec. 15. In the month since then it has dropped back to 12.5 million shares.

Some analysts have felt for weeks now that some stocks are bargains by any reckoning. Among these stocks are widely held blue chips that were knocked down in 1966 because of peculiar, special factors.

Credit is loosening again. Money is expected to be more freely lent after almost strangling some areas of business last year. This could offset some negative pressure if the proposed 6 per cent surcharge is added to income taxes later this year.

The Vietnam war psychology also has been mentioned as changing subtly, with a successful resolution of the war not a distant hope.

Some of the uncertainty about President Johnson's economic stance also has been clarified. The President, after long months of apparent indecision, has asked for the surcharge on income taxes. The erosion of business confidence in the administration that occurred during much of 1966 seems to have been left behind. Perhaps it has reached its low, perhaps it has risen, perhaps business is wearying of talking about it.

With these and other factors discounted, the pressures to remain out of the market must have lessened. Some big blocks of stock now indicate institutions are among the buyers.

GAME UNCOVERS TOTS' HEARING PROBLEMS

Pictures of an airplane, a cowboy, a fire truck, a wristwatch, and other familiar objects have proven useful in uncovering hearing problems of preschool children. According to the Minnesota State Medical Society, 10 percent of almost 30,000 youngsters whose hearing was tested by the new technique, were referred for further medical examination to check possible hearing disorders.

Usually, children with mild hearing loss are not recognized until they are in second or third grade, Terry S. Griffing, the Mayo Clinic audiologist who devised the new test pointed out at a recent meeting here of eye and ear specialists. By that time considerable damage might have been done a child's self-confidence, he said. This test increases the chances of picking up hearing problems earlier.

This is how it works: A preschooler fitted with ear phones listens as a tape recorded voice asks him to point out one or another of the 12 pictures of familiar objects in front of him. The instructions are given at various sound levels, including that of normal speech. Failure to hear a certain number of words at the lower-decibel range is an indication of possible hearing loss. The roar of a lion, a low-decibel sound, and the chirp of a bird, a high-decibel sound, are also included in the test.

MANY PATIENTS IGNORE DOCTORS' ORDERS

"Communication between doctor and patient ideally necessitates a certain degree of reciprocity." And as in other areas, however, the ideal and real are quite far apart. According to a study presented at a meeting here of the American Public Health Association, a whopping 37 percent of patients disregarded what their doctors advised. Why? Because patients and doctors are people, and what happens between them affects the extent to which a patient will cooperate.

According to Milton S. Davis, Ph.D., assistant professor of Sociology in Medicine at the Cornell University Medical College, when a patient is authoritative and a doctor permissive, the former is apt to ignore the latter's recommendations. He is likely to do the same if the doctor seems antagonistic. Uncooperative behavior may also result when there is "nonreciprocal informativeness," that is, when a doctor collects information from a patient but fails to feed back any. If tensions between the physician and patient build up and these are not explored and released, the patient may respond by failing to comply with orders.

Neither age, sex, education, marital status, religion, or occupation seemed to affect compliance or noncompliance.

SUGGEST A CAUSE FOR URINARY AILMENT

About one of every 10 women who suffer from urinary frequency have no urologic disease. Their distressing symptom may, rather, be related to sexual problems and other psychological upsets.

This is the finding reported by Dr. Donald R. Smith to a recent American Medical Association meeting here. In addition to various drugs that might offer relief, Dr. Smith recommended psychotherapy to get at the basic cause of the problem. The physician is chairman of the Division of urology at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco.

HIDDEN SCARS

Fire had come to these woods one day
and left the trees blackened and scarred--
dead in places, too --
with their limbs hanging like the
broken wind of a bird.
But they came out of it somehow--
out of the fire, I mean --
and five years, ten years, perhaps,
one would never know of the hidden
scars...
Unless other fires came.

Lisa Hughes Returns to World Turns

NEW YORK (AP) — For daytime television viewers this was the week when Lisa Hughes came back to "As The World Turns."

"As The World Turns," it should be explained, is a daytime serial, or soap opera, on CBS that has been a favorite for so many years it probably should start dropping five years from its age. It moves inexorably from emotional crisis to crisis and is sneered at by people unable to watch television regularly during the daylight hours.

For the faithful fans, the return of Lisa Hughes was pretty exciting, for she had been a sort of antiheroine of the show for six years. In May, 1965, on the heels of the success of "Peyton Place," CBS decided to spin a nighttime soap opera off the popular daytime series. So one day Lisa Hughes, played by attractive Eileen Fulton, boarded a Chicago-bound train in Oakdale, scene of "As The World Turns." That night a new program, "Another World" had its premiere and was built around Lisa's new life in the big city.

As it turned out, "Another World" never made the ratings grade and quietly disappeared with the new season in September. Lisa returned briefly to Oakdale and daytime TV long enough to wrap up some loose ends and then was returned to Chicago, a second husband and oblivion — until last Monday.

Miss Fulon, who had majored in music and voice in college, was busily launching a night-club carer.

"But now I'm back in Oakdale," she reported. "People who came to see me as Eileen Fulton were marvelous but they also made me realize how important Lisa Hughes has been to me. I just don't want to lose those people.

"The audience seems to despise Lisa but love her at the same time. She has spunk and ambition, but she's — well, she's devious and does awful things that cause trouble."

Every time government goes into business in competition with private enterprise, it has to have special privileges in order to compete.

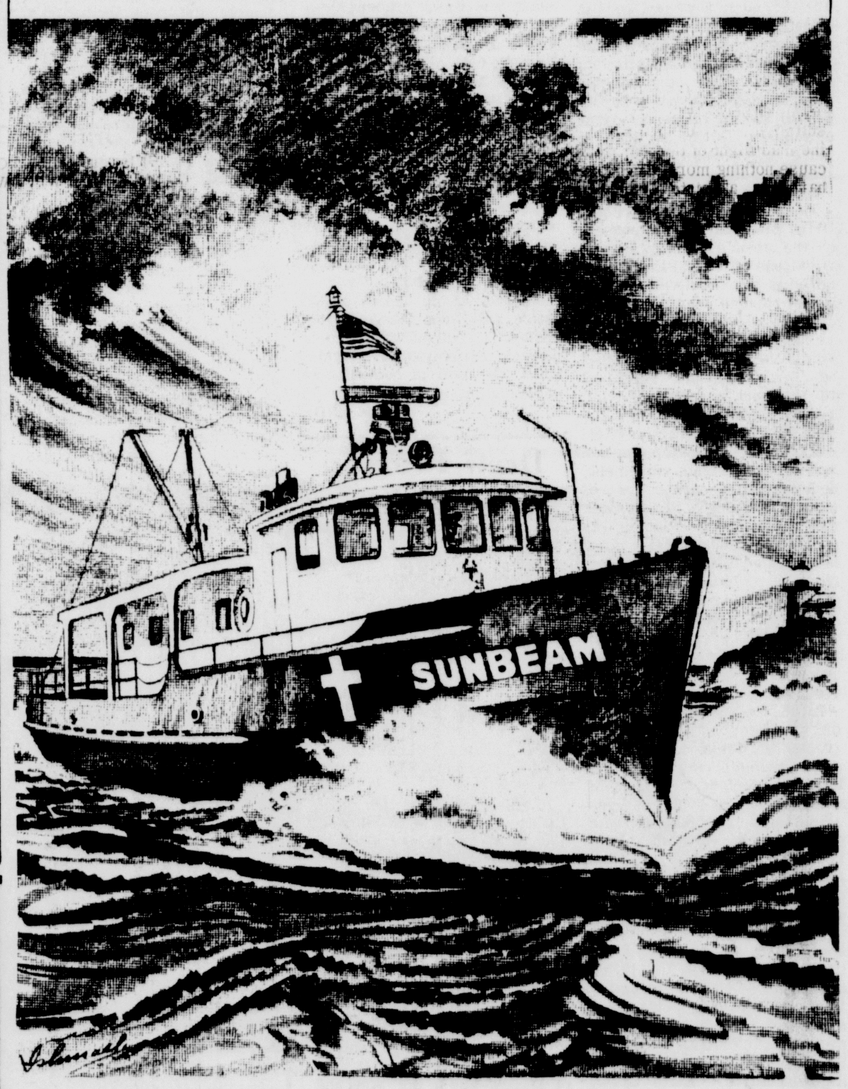
The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL



To isolated communities and families along the coast and on the islands of the state of Maine, the boat Sunbeam III is a symbol of Christian hope, help and brotherhood. It is the working arm of The Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society. In all kinds of weather it carries the tangibles and intangibles of Christian service. The mission ministers make hundreds of parish calls, hold services and give special attention to the aged and ill. At Christmas the Sunbeam delivers 1,500 gifts to lonely villages and lighthouses.

The Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society has grown and flourished since 1905 because of the faith of many people across the country.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, one time president of the board of the Society, wrote a poem titled "Little Ship Sunbeam." He read it at the launching of Sunbeam II in 1926. The last stanza could well be the watchword for the Society.

Then let the wind blow high or low,
Serene and brave our boat shall go,
For Jesus sails the sea again,
Along the granite coast of Maine.

Owner Says Blarney Stone Not for Sale or for Hire

By EDDY GILMORE

BLARNEY, Ireland (AP) — "Neither the Blarney Stone nor any part of it is going to America or to any other place," said its owner. "But the people do still try to buy it."

Who tries to buy it?

"Americans mostly," replied Mary Penelope Hillyard, who inherited ancient Blarney Castle and its world-famous stone in 1952.

Americans?

"Oh, yes. Someone is always walking up here to the new castle and trying to buy it. When they find they can't get it, then they try to settle by buying our dog Kelly, or one like him."

Kelly is a tremendous Irish wolfhound who looks almost as Irish as the stone which is supposed to give those who kiss it the gift of gab. For at least 50 years, Americans have been trying to buy the stone, or chunks of it.

In 1949, John P. Hewlitt, who was born in Atlanta, Ga., actually announced he had negotiated to have it flown to the United States and taken on a nationwide tour, with proceeds going to charity.

But Sir George Colhurst, the the owner, said there had been a misunderstanding and the stone would never leave the castle for the United States or elsewhere, "because I doubt if I'd ever get it back."

After that Sir George wrote in his will: "It is my desire that as far as I can prevent it, the said stone, or any part of it, shall never be sold or removed from the old castle at Blarney."

The Blarney Stone is at old Blarney Castle. Mrs. Hillyard and her husband, Maj. Jack Hillyard, a retired British army officer, live at new Blarney Castle, a gray stone building about 100 years old and a quarter - mile from the old castle.

The Blarney Stone is one of the world's best known objects. People come by the thousands to kiss it, which is something of a gymnastic trick.

In 1805, a book "Stranger in Ireland," carried this note:

"About four miles before we reached Cork on our left, my fair companion du voyage pointed out Blarney Castle with its turret. It is recorded that there is a stone there very nearly inaccessible which it is stated possesses the rare virtue of making those very happy who touch it."

In those days kissing the Blarney Stone was dangerous, for the would-be kisser had to be suspended head downward from the battlements, with a strong man holding his ankles — in order to get his lips on the stone. Should the holder let go, the fall is about 125 feet.

After a man was killed at the old castle, kissing the stone was made easier — and safer.

Two vertical bars now extend inside the battlements, straight down to the stone. By sitting down and leaning backwards, while holding to the vertical bars, a fairly agile person can easily plant his lips on the stone.

"I've done it many times with no one holding me," said Mrs. Hillyard "It's not hard.

The best offer the owner has ever received for the Blarney Stone-4-foot by 1-inch long, by 1-foot 1-inch wide, and 9-inches thick — is $280,000.

"A lot of money," she said, "but still — no sale."

In 1949 a medical officer, Dr. L. C. Geiger from San Francisco, took one look at the Blarney Stone and was reported as commenting: "It's unhygienic. Over the centuries germs must have been planted on it in layers."

The owner pooh-poohs this suggestion.

"It's regularly cleaned," she said, "but even if it wasn't, just look at the rain."

Where did the Blarney Stone come from? The legends are numerous. One is that it was Jacob's pillow and was brought to Ireland during one of the Crusades.

Another is that the stone came from part of a Druids circle near the castle.

A considerably believed theory is that the stone came from Scotland as a gift from Robert the Bruce. After the Battle of Bannockburn, in grateful appreciation of Irish aid, the great Bruce sent the Blarney Stone and it was stuck on the battlement.

Now Gals Wear the Shirts

By HELEN HENNESSY
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Apart from the big noise over miniskirts there's a shirt making big news in Paris right now. It's a lady's shirt, tailored with traditional men's button-down collar and it's being worn by all the French gals who originate so much of the sportswear fashion news.

The poor boy sweater was their most recent export of note to the American scene and all we have to do is count how many we see here now to realize how important such a trend can become. If we follow the direction indicated at this moment shirts may well be the poor boys' successors.

In thinking of shirts we tend to visualize men's classics. Yet there's a whole new realm of shirt design developing. Imaginatively designed women's shirts, not to be confused with blouses, are being made by several traditional men's shirtmakers. Quality is essential and fabric excellence a prime factor. Many of the finest new shirts are in fabrics containing Avril rayon.

Avril rayon is absorbent, which spells comfort for the wearer, yet it offers all the desirable easy-care qualities of synthetic fibers.

Shirtmakers who have been catering to the demanding tastes of quality-conscious men for years bring excellent experience to women's wear. They know that a good shirt can be the staple of a wardrobe and that it will receive lots of wear and laundering. In addition to their fine workmanship, they now give us fashion news as well as quality in the fabrics they choose for women's shirts. There are crinkle textures, for example, all manner of thick and thin stripes, plus floral prints in splurges of intense color.

ONE CHIC NEW WAY TO WEAR a pantsuit is with a precisely tailored shirt massed with deep red, gold and white flowers. Lady Arrow's choice (left) is a blend of Avril rayon and cotton in durable press. Avril rayon and polyster are blended in the striped fabric (right) in earth brown and white. A granddad style but by Gant Shirtmakers, this shirt shows its Victorian heritage with proper white collar and cuffs.

WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME?

It echoes in our hearts, Christ's anguished cry,
Piercing to the depths, as in that hour
It battered a bleak, unrelenting sky
And left the Saviour bound in mortal power.
For have we not, in lesser measure, known
The terror of the orphaned, understood
How pain can rasp the soul? We've felt our own
Forsakenness in grief, shared doubts that good
Might come of such sore tests, Yet when storms beat
Against us, in rebellion we have railed
As if it were some undeserving mete
And we, the chosen, must not be assailed,
Forgetting how God works His miracle
On trusting souls, surrendered to His will.

by JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The upward thrust of the 1967 stock market, following sharply an 11-month decline, is surprising some cynics who feel that the new mood is superficial-motivated merely by the flipping of a calendar page.

January traditionally has been a month of increases, a time when traders reinvest their yearend dividends or bonuses -- or cash from tax-loss selling.

This year the gloomy sellers of late December have become the hopeful buyers of early January, doing an about-face in perfect step with the calendar.

The prices of stocks fell on average in 10 of the 12 months of 1966. Now, since the turn of the year, almost every day has produced increases in values, sometimes accompanied by very heavy trading.

There is no assurance, of course, that this will continue. Some large investment advisers are, in fact, encouraging subscribers to increase their reserves, to bide their time and watch and wait.

There are some factors in the latest advance that are easy to understand. Since there was a real plunge in stock prices last year there was much selling in December to establish losses for deduction on 1966 income tax payments. Some of this money is now returning to the market.

In addition, a lot of bears came out of the woods in that month. Short interest rose to a record high of 14.6 million shares Dec. 15. In the month since then it has dropped back to 12.5 million shares.

Some analysts have felt for weeks now that some stocks are bargains by any reckoning. Among these stocks are widely held blue chips that were knocked down in 1966 because of peculiar, special factors.

Credit is loosening again. Money is expected to be more freely lent after almost strangling some areas of business last year. This could offset some negative pressure if the proposed 6 per cent surcharge is added to income taxes later this year.

The Vietnam war psychology also has been mentioned as changing subtly, with a successful resolution of the war not a distant hope.

Some of the uncertainty about President Johnson's economic stance also has been clarified. The President, after long months of apparent indecision, has asked for the surcharge on income taxes. The erosion of business confidence in the administration that occurred during much of 1966 seems to have been left behind. Perhaps it has reached its low, perhaps it has risen, perhaps business is wearying of talking about it.

With these and other factors discounted, the pressures to remain out of the market must have lessened. Some big blocks of stock now inuicate institutions are among the buyers.

GAME UNCOVERS TOTS' HEARING PROBLEMS

Pictures of an airplane, a cowboy, a fire truck, a wristwatch, and other familiar objects have proven useful in uncovering hearing problems of preschool children. According to the Minnesota State Medical Society, 10 percent of almost 30,000 youngsters whose hearing was tested by the new technique, were referred for further medical examination to check possible hearing disorders.

Usually, children with mild hearing loss are not recognized until they are in second or third grade, Terry S. Griffing, the Mayo Clinic audiologist who devised the new test pointed out at a recent meeting here of eye and ear specialists. By that time considerable damage might have been done a child's self-confidence, he said. This test increases the chances of picking up hearing problems earlier.

This is how it works: A preschooler fitted with ear phones listens as a tape recorded voice asks him to point out one or another of the 12 pictures of familiar objects in front of him. The instructions are given at various sound levels, including that of normal speech. Failure to hear a certain number of words at the lower-decibel range is an indication of possible hearing loss. The roar of a lion, a low-decibel sound, and the chirp of a bird, a high-decibel sound, are also included in the test.

MANY PATIENTS IGNORE DOCTORS' ORDERS

"Communication between doctor and patient ideally necessitates a certain degree of reciprocity." And as in other areas, however, the ideal and real are quite far apart. According to a study presented at a meeting here of the American Public Health Association, a whopping 37 percent of patients disregarded what their doctors advised. Why? Because patients and doctors are people, and what happens between them affects the extent to which a patient will cooperate.

According to Milton S. Davis, Ph.D., assistant professor of Sociology in Medicine at the Cornell University Medical College, when a patient is authoritative and a doctor permissive, the former is apt to ignore the latter's recommendations. He is likely to do the same if the doctor seems antagonistic. Uncooperative behavior may also result when there is "nonreciprocal informativeness," that is, when a doctor collects information from a patient but fails to feed back any. If tensions between the physician and patient build up and these are not explored and released, the patient may respond by failing to comply with orders.

Neither age, sex, education, marital status, religion, or occupation seemed to affect compliance or noncompliance.

SUGGEST A CAUSE FOR URINARY AILMENT

About one of every 10 women who suffer from urinary frequency have no urologic disease. Their distressing symptom may, rather, be related to sexual problems and other psychological upsets.

This is the finding reported by Dr. Donald R. Smith to a recent American Medical Association meeting here. In addition to various drugs that might offer relief, Dr. Smith recommended psychotherapy to get at the basic cause of the problem. The physician is chairman of the Division of urology at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco.

HIDDEN SCARS

Fire had come to these woods one day
and left the trees blackened and scarred--
dead in places, too --
with their limbs hanging like the
broken wind of a bird.
But they came out of it somehow--
out of the fire, I mean --
and five years, ten years, perhaps,
one would never know of the hidden
scars. . .
Unless other fires came.

Lisa Hughes Returns to World Turns

NEW YORK (AP) — For daytime television viewers this was the week when Lisa Hughes came back to "As The World Turns."

"As The World Turns," it should be explained, is a daytime serial, or soap opera, on CBS that has been a favorite for so many years it probably should start dropping five years from its age. It moves inexorably from emotional crisis to crisis and is sneered at by people unable to watch television regularly during the daylight hours.

For the faithful fans, the return of Lisa Hughes was pretty exciting, for she had been a sort of antiheroine of the show for six years. In May, 1965, on the heels of the success of "Peyton Place," CBS decided to spin a nighttime soap opera off the popular daytime series. So one day Lisa Hughes, played by attractive Eileen Fulton, boarded a Chicago-bound train in Oakdale, scene of "As The World Turns." That night a new program, "Another World" had its premiere and was built around Lisa's new life in the big city.

As it turned out, "Another World" never made the ratings grade and quietly disappeared with the new season in September. Lisa returned briefly to Oakdale and daytime TV long enough to wrap up some loose ends and then was returned to Chicago, a second husband and oblivion — until last Monday.

Miss Fulon, who had majored in music and voice in college, was busily launching a night-club carer.

"But now I'm back in Oakdale," she reported. "People who came to see me as Eileen Fulton were marvelous but they also made me realize how important Lisa Hughes has been to me. I just don't want to lose those people.

"The audience seems to despise Lisa but love her at the same time. She has spunk and ambition, but she's — well, she's devious and does awful things that cause trouble."

Every time government goes into business in competition with private enterprise, it has to have special privileges in order to compete.

JESUS INTERPRETS HIS MISSION

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

BUMBLEBEE FIGHTS

When I was a boy, one of the chief sports was fighting bumblebees. From the ease with which we found nests, bumblebees must have been more plentiful then than now. The sport, I believe, is a thing of the past.

Two weapons were used after hostilities began. One was a paddle, for offense; and the other a bunch of iron weeds for defense. It was no time or place for sissies. Only boys who had stout hearts and willing hands, and who could stand some real punishment, were qualified for such sport.

A quick eye and a quicker hand were necessary, once the leader had plunged a stick into the nest and stirred the bumblebees up. The strategy was to smack the onrushing bees with the paddle, failing which the bunch of weeds was swept furiously back and forth across the face for protection. No battlefield could produce more excitement and activity than a bumblebee fight. Boys rated it the finest sport of all.

Until tractors eliminated horses from the scheme of things on the farm the bumblebees furnished no end of unsought excitement, especially during harvest season. The farmer would go forth to his wheat, oats or hay field with mind attuned to the beauties of Nature or to the profit and loss of the grain or hay he was about to lay down. The hum of the sickle became sweet, rhythmic music to his ears, and he soon was at peace with the world, even with neighbor boys who had raided his watermelon patch or the neighbor whose bull had smashed a panel of fence and let the herd into his corn. All of a sudden, however, the plodding team began to rear and kick, then would take off across the landscape at the last inch of its speed. A nest of bumblebees had been disturbed and every bee was having revenge on team and driver. Clouds of dust here and there on the horizon evidence similar incidents on other farms. Sometimes a driver would be thrown in front of his sickle, with tragic results to him. Usually, however, the mad flight of the team would cause nothing more than broken harness, a twisted piece of machinery or some wicked language from the man whose job was to help feed an unappreciative world. As matters now stand, bumblebees get nothing but disappointment from an attack on the metal monster with which modern harvesting is done.

WHEN CANDLES WERE USED

When I was a boy there was not an electric light in Missouri. Some Monroe County homes used small coal oil lamps. Others used candles.

The lamps had No. 1 wicks, meaning wicks about half an inch wide. They made very little light but were evidences of progress and prosperity which distinguished their owners from those who continued to use candles.

When I first learned to set type and feed a press in the Appeal office, we occasionally had to work at night. Always we worked by candlelight. At press or case we made the candle stand erect by first dropping some grease from the lighted end on the flat surface, then set the lower end of the candle in it. When the grease cooled the candle was firmly fixed.

On very special occasions during that era Paris would have an "illumination" as a feature of a celebration program. All the windows in the Courthouse, stores, offices and some of the homes would have rows of candles across them and at the appointed hour these candles would be lighted. Then, all the boys and half the men in town, many carrying torches, would march through Main street and several of the residence streets, with the town band leading the way. Such an illumination in these days of electricity would arouse nothing but ridicule and laughter. Back there it was brilliant and thrilling beyond description.

With the coming of the lamp the tallow candle was doomed. For a time only those in good circumstances had lamps. In due time, however, the impulse to keep up with the neighbors brought the lamp into just as general use as the same impulse brought the telephone, electric light, radio, electric refrigerator and automobile into general use.

A RACING EPIC

The Racing Epic of my boyhood days was between a great trotter owned by Jeff Bridgford and a ringer local sports imported from Jacksonville, Ill. The ringer arrived as part of a team that was pulling a mover wagon. Jim Worrell professed to buy him for use as motive power for his paint wagon.

In due time, one of the local sports provoked an argument with Church Bridgford, in the course of which he belittled the Bridgford trotter and offered to bet $500 that Jim Worrell's old paint wagon steed could beat him. The bet, of course, was promptly taken. Other local sports who were wise to the conspiracy, put up a good sum and, of course, a race was arranged. It was held on the Moberly tract, with thousands of spectators.

The Bridgford horse, sleek and eager, was quite a contrast to the paint wagon horse, which looked dejected and seemed to lack interest. When the go signal was given, however, the dejected paint wagon steed suddenly came to life and the Bridgford horse might as well have been tied to a post. What local sports had done was to import a gentle but swift horse from a professional stable for their nefarious plot.

CHEESE AND CRACKER ERA

When I was a boy the cheese and cracker business was a feature of every grocery store in towns and village. In places like Paris, Mo., which had a population of around 2000, there were no cafes, no restaurants, no establishments of any sort in which hungry people could get a noonday lunch. Unless willing to partronize a hotel, their only resource was the grocery store. The usual order was for a nickel's worth from a cheese that was two feet in diameter.

I doubt if any grocer of that era came out even on a cheese of that size, since most of it was sold on nickel orders and only a miracle man could have cut so small a slice from so large a cheese. Six or eight crackers were given with every order. The crackers were much larger than those now on the market. They came in large boxes. The barrel usually stood uncovered and in reach of loafers who did a lot of mooching.

In our printing office the work was done by my father and three of his sons, including myself. We had the cheese and cracker habit. Every morning at 10 o'clock the three boys would quit their type cases and join their bewhiskered father, all sinking to their knees on the floor. It was not a prayer session, however. It was to invoke the time-honored jeffing game, to decide who should buy a nickel's worth of cheese and crackers. This game was played with five m-quads from a 10-point case, each quad, like all other items in a font of type, having nicks on one side. Three throws were allowed to each contestant. The one who scored the most upturned nicks was high man. The man who scored the least was the loser. This game probably was the forerunner of craps, in that the player should roll the quads while on his knees and out of his hands.

His measure as a man depends on your measure as a parent!

How can you add to your measure? Going to worship is the simple act of faith that makes man and boy just a little taller.

In our complex and often trying world, faith offers its own answers to the problems that weigh on you. Next time you say to yourself, "But what can I do?" about the "unsolvable" difficulties of today, remember that peace in the world starts with peace in you.

Go to worship, take your family to church or synagogue with you, this week. Your faith reaffirms the sacredness of Man and Life. And a better world starts with this very idea!

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

BUMBLEBEE FIGHTS

When I was a boy, one of the chief sports was fighting bumblebees. From the ease with which we found nests, bumblebees must have been more plentiful then than now. The sport, I believe, is a thing of the past.

Two weapons were used after hostilities began. One was a paddle, for offense; and the other a bunch of iron weeds for defense. It was no time or place for sissies. Only boys who had stout hearts and willing hands, and who could stand some real punishment, were qualified for such sport.

A quick eye and a quicker hand were necessary, once the leader had plunged a stick into the nest and stirred the bumblebees up. The strategy was to smack the onrushing bees with the paddle, failing which the bunch of weeds was swept furiously back and forth across the face for protection. No battlefield could produce more excitement and activity than a bumblebee fight. Boys rated it the finest sport of all.

Until tractors eliminated horses from the scheme of things on the farm the bumblebees furnished no end of unsought excitement, especially during harvest season. The farmer would go forth to his wheat, oats or hay field with mind attuned to the beauties of Nature or to the profit and loss of the grain or hay he was about to lay down. The hum of the sickle became sweet, rhythmic music to his ears, and he soon was at peace with the world, even with neighbor boys who had raided his watermelon patch or the neighbor whose bull had smashed a panel of fence and let the herd into his corn. All of a sudden, however, the plodding team began to rear and kick, then would take off across the landscape at the last inch of its speed. A nest of bumblebees had been disturbed and every bee was having revenge on team and driver. Clouds of dust here and there on the horizon evidence similar incidents on other farms. Sometimes a driver would be thrown in front of his sickle, with tragic results to him. Usually, however, the mad flight of the team would cause nothing more than broken harness, a twisted piece of machinery or some wicked language from the man whose job was to help feed an unappreciative world. As matters now stand, bumblebees get nothing but disappointment from an attack on the metal monster with which modern harvesting is done.

WHEN CANDLES WERE USED

When I was a boy there was not an electric light in Missouri. Some Monroe County homes used small coal oil lamps. Others used candles.

The lamps had No. 1 wicks, meaning wicks about half an inch wide. They made very little light but were evidences of progress and prosperity which distinguished their owners from those who continued to use candles.

When I first learned to set type and feed a press in the Appeal office, we occasionally had to work at night. Always we worked by candlelight. At press or case we made the candle stand erect by first dropping some grease from the lighted end on the flat surface, then set the lower end of the candle in it. When the grease cooled the candle was firmly fixed.

On very special occasions during that era Paris would have an "illumination" as a feature of a celebration program. All the windows in the Courthouse, stores, offices and some of the homes would have rows of candles across them and at the appointed hour these candles would be lighted. Then, all the boys and half the men in town, many carrying torches, would march through Main street and several of the residence streets, with the town band leading the way. Such an illumination in these days of electricity would arouse nothing but ridicule and laughter. Back there it was brilliant and thrilling beyond description.

With the coming of the lamp the tallow candle was doomed. For a time only those in good circumstances had lamps. In due time, however, the impulse to keep up with the neighbors brought the lamp into just as general use as the same impulse brought the telephone, electric light, radio, electric refrigerator and automobile into general use.

A RACING EPIC

The Racing Epic of my boyhood days was between a great trotter owned by Jeff Bridgford and a ringer local sports imported from Jacksonville, Ill. The ringer arrived as part of a team that was pulling a mover wagon. Jim Worrell professed to buy him for use as motive power for his paint wagon.

In due time, one of the local sports provoked an argument with Church Bridgford, in the course of which he belittled the Bridgford trotter and offered to bet $500 that Jim Worrell's old paint wagon steed could beat him. The bet, of course, was promptly taken. Other local sports who were wise to the conspiracy, put up a good sum and, of course, a race was arranged. It was held on the Moberly tract, with thousands of spectators.

The Bridgford horse, sleek and eager, was quite a contrast to the paint wagon horse, which looked dejected and seemed to lack interest. When the go signal was given, however, the dejected paint wagon steed suddenly came to life and the Bridgford horse might as well have been tied to a post. What local sports had done was to import a gentle but swift horse from a professional stable for their nefarious plot.

CHEESE AND CRACKER ERA

When I was a boy the cheese and cracker business was a feature of every grocery store in towns and village. In places like Paris, Mo., which had a population of around 2000, there were no cafes, no restaurants, no establishments of any sort in which hungry people could get a noonday lunch. Unless willing to partronize a hotel, their only resource was the grocery store. The usual order was for a nickel's worth from a cheese that was two feet in diameter.

I doubt if any grocer of that era came out even on a cheese of that size, since most of it was sold on nickel orders and only a miracle man could have cut so small a slice from so large a cheese. Six or eight crackers were given with every order. The crackers were much larger than those now on the market. They came in large boxes. The barrel usually stood uncovered and in reach of loafers who did a lot of mooching.

In our printing office the work was done by my father and three of his sons, including myself. We had the cheese and cracker habit. Every morning at 10 o'clock the three boys would quit their type cases and join their bewhiskered father, all sinking to their knees on the floor. It was not a prayer session, however. It was to invoke the time-honored jeffing game, to decide who should buy a nickel's worth of cheese and crackers. This game was played with five m-quads from a 10-point case, each quad, like all other items in a font of type, having nicks on one side. Three throws were allowed to each contestant. The one who scored the most upturned nicks was high man. The man who scored the least was the loser. This game probably was the forerunner of craps, in that the player should roll the quads while on his knees and out of his hands.

#66 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area

His measure as a man depends on your measure as a parent!

How can you add to your measure? Going to worship is the simple act of faith that makes man and boy just a little taller.

In our complex and often trying world, faith offers its own answers to the problems that weigh on you. Next time you say to yourself, "But what can I do?" about the "unsolvable" difficulties of today, remember that peace in the world starts with peace in you.

Go to worship, take your family to church or synagogue with you, this week. Your faith reaffirms the sacredness of Man and Life. And a better world starts with this very idea!

Students Hurry Too Often: America Needs Relaxation

WHY IS EVERYONE IN A HURRY? The world is spinning 16,500 miles per hour and man is doing his level best to leave it behind. America, especially, is running itself to a frenzy.

This peculiar characteristic is evident in the high school, as can be noticed at lunchtime, when people run over, around, and into everybody else.

American's lives are puppets of time. An American cannot go anywhere or do anything casually--his life has to be regulated, divided, and segmented in a futile attempt to capture a little bit of eternity.

One stampedes to lunch to be "intime" to avoid waiting. One hurries to the lounge after eating to socialize for a minute or two, and then scurries off to class, to wait impatiently for the hour to end.

Finally the day is over, and everyone leaves school as quickly as possible or else frets in the lounge until transportation arrives. At home one waits, counting hours, for some special event; or maybe just a television show. People seem to burn up all their energy either going somewhere or waiting to get there.

Driving is probably the most graphic example of America's rush. How many lives are lost by someone burning his tires off to reach a stop sign? Why must people go fives miles over the limit instead of under?

The point is -- slow down! Relax! Don't be in such a regulated hurry to do everything. Stop and talk to someone you know instead of just tossing a brief greeting. If a tight schedule must be met, plan it out to allow a little extra time -- and don't spend that time worrying about what you might be doing.

Make a habit of being an easy-going, likeable person, instead of admiring someone else who is. Drive five miles under the speed limit for a while. Soon the world will seem a little more under your control; you CAN exist moving at half speed, and you have plenty of power in reserve.

Second Semester Begins; What Does Future Hold?

AS THE SECOND SEMESTER begins, realization of what the future holds is in all of the students' minds.

To seniors it is the final semester of their high school days. The future is filled with thoughts of college and careers. As graduation day draws nearer, seniors find it difficult to believe that this is finally THEIR graduation.

To juniors it means only one more semester left and then they will be able to claim the title of seniors. They will no longer have the dreaded name of "underclassmen."

Juniors have all the activities to look forward to that are now becoming memories to seniors, such as Red Peppers, football and basketball games, homecoming, student body elections, and many more events at Sikeston high.

To sophomores it just means that they have one less semester to worry about and that they have finally become acquainted with the customs and rules of Sikeston high school.

They are not discouraged, for they retain the thought that some day THEY will be the seniors and will get the satisfaction of being upperclassmen.

Seniors, remember, only 126 days until graduation; use them wisely and make plans for the future that is waiting for you.

Farris Ranks 'Outstanding' In Athletics

During the football season, Bruce backed up the senior quarterback Wayne Limbaugh. He scored 18 points in varsity play, and he was the starting quarterback on the "B" team.

He was also one of the very few sophomores to letter his first year in high school.

Bruce plays forward on both the "A" and "B" teams in basketball.

He also has a special interest in baseball. For the past few years he has been pitching in the Babe Ruth team, and he was chosen on the All-Star team last year.

Bruce pitched in the two tournaments participated in by the All-Star team in Sikeston and Poplar Bluff last summer. He was voted the most valuable player in each of the games.

Bruce plans to try out for pitcher on the baseball team at school in the spring. He hopes to try for third base on the Connie Mack team in Sikeston next summer.

Bruce is also a member of the student council, representing homeroom 10-C.

He is vice-president of the sophomore class.

Bruce hopes to attend the University of Missouri after he graduates from Sikeston high school.

New Courses Help Seniors Plan Future

Independent Study, Career Explorations Given This Semester

Independent study is designed to teach students how to manage time and to prepare them for college.

Each student is given two weeks to select a subject of interest to him on which a formal paper will be written.

Carl Wright is the coordinator of the course and will help students if they are confronted with problems concerning the course; -- otherwise, the student's time is his own to prepare his paper.

The paper will not receive a letter grade. It will be graded by a committee and rated as acceptable, non-acceptable, or excellent.

Students enrolled in independent study are Camille Bowman, Steve Spear, Becky Wagner, Toni Zaricor, and Teresa Hamelmann.

Kay Trigg, Patti McMullin, Charles Stamp, Ned Matthews, Skip Alsup, Larry Lancaster, Danny Spears, Roger Francis, Bill Lashmet, and George Bechtold.

Career explorations is being offered for the first time this semester. An enrollment of 37 students proves the definite interest taken by students in careers.

Self appraisal will be the first goal of students in career exploration. Each student will compare ability, aptitude, and interest with the career he plans to choose.

Professional occupations will be considered. Guest speakers are to speak to the class during the year about occupations.

Each student will then select a career of interest to him and will do individual research on this career.

Finally the students will learn how to find and apply for jobs in both small towns and big cities.

Independent study and career exploration are devised for seniors and their futures.

'Printing Week' Reminds World: January 15—21

International Printing Week has been observed during the past week in nations throughout the world. Tomorrow signifies the end of this week commemorating the invention of the printing press.

This past week has been celebrated to honor the graphic arts, printing house craftsmen, and the 259th birthday of Benjamin Franklin, who was instrumental in improving the art of printing.

People seldom stop to consider the "power of print," taking for granted each day the books they study. It is too often forgotten that but for the printing press only the wealthy would be able to obtain the books transcribed by hand in the monastaries.

Democracy, such as that known in the United States, can thrive only on an educated people, and without print the multitudes would not have the abundant opportunity for education.

As a news media, print cannot be overlooked. It is one of the most important factors in communicating the news to the populace.

Readers of today can quickly discover the facts they need to know by glancing at the headlines and decks specified to make the topic plain.

International Printing Week is set up in order to remind the people of the importance of print in extending their reservoirs of knowledge, and by so doing, furthering democracy in the United States. An informed people is a free people.

Bulldog Barker is printed by the journalists of Sikeston high school each week. These students strive to use various size of types to make an attractive layout.

Staffers are always on the alert for "news," and if anyone has a story or some items he would like to see "in print," please be sure to inform the journalists early in each week.

"Obesity is a condition which proves that the Lord does not help those who help themselves and help themselves and help themselves."

Yearbook Sales Close March 1: Order Growler

Growler sales campaign will close Wednesday, March 1.

Sales will continue until this date, and no yearbooks may be purchased after the deadline.

Students desiring to purchase an annual should contact any member of the journalism class for it is necessary to send the exact number of Growlers needed to the yearbook publisher on that date.

No additional copies may be ordered after that time from the company.

Payments of $5 per book may be given to Mike Buchanan, Connie Nowell, Linda Bennett, Barb Blacker, Darla Scoles, Cheryl Hurley, Mary Reid, Steve Spear, Camille Bowman, Judy Murchison, Stan McMackins, Greg Bailey, or Bill Marsh.

These staff members will receive payments before school, at noon, and after school each day.

Growler pages (approximately 50) were sent to the publisher in December, and another shipment will be made in February.

Final shipment of the yearbook must be made to the publisher by June 10. This will enable the annual to be a complete review of the year's activities.

Growlers will be distributed to the students about the middle of August -- this enables the seniors to receive the books before they leave for college in September.

Homemaking Class Offers Various Units Of Study

Mrs. Hemba Young and Mrs. Larry April instruct students in various courses of the homemaking department in Sikeston high school.

Topics offered each semester in high school are tailoring, child development, home nursing, home management, home decorating, family living, grooming, intermediate foods and clothing, and advanced foods and clothing.

Each of these units is designed with the purpose to further the knowledge of the students who will be applying these practices in further life.

Students in the tailoring class learn to design and construct wool garments.

Child development is a lecture course with some observation at nursery and kindergarten schools in Sikeston.

Home nursing students study a Red Cross textbook and have a session of 12 laboratory meetings, supervised by the practical nursing students enrolled in the Manpower-Development program of the Sikeston schools.

Semester unit in home management is a course where students study the management of money, time, energy, and personal ability.

Home decoration teaches the members how to coordinate color for all surfaces--furniture and interior of home.

Advanced foods instructs students to be creative in the use of easy-to-serve and packaged foods; know the food habits and customs of individuals of various cultural, racial, and religious backgrounds; and study health and safety practices with food in the home.

Household technology, directed by Mrs. April, offers instruction in job success, cleaning skills, laundry, home care of sick, and foods.

The unit in cleaning teaches the students how to clean windows and rooms; during the foods unit members of the class are required to purchase prepare, and serve a complete meal.

Do you know . . .

1. Who played in the Golden Eagles Band and sang in the glee club for one year at Southeast Missouri State College?

Cheerleaders Name Three As 'Outstanding Peppers'

Joyce Vaught, Lynne Tenkhoff, and Mary Anne Sappenfield were chosen "outstanding Red Peppers" Friday night as Sikeston played Charleston at Anniston.

Cheerleaders named these three girls as "outstanding Red Peppers" because of their enthusiastic cheering throughout the entire game.

Sikeston won the "B" game, but lost the "A" game by three points.

Attendance by the Red Peppers at the game was described as good, and the girls are to be complimented on their desire to display school spirit.

Bulldogs will face the Malden Green Waves at the Sikeston Armory tonight. Red Peppers are urged to be in their seats by 7 p.m.

"B" game begins at 7, and the "A" team faces the opponents at approximately 8:30.

SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE

A six-year-old boy was watching in fascination a larger-than-average woman weighing herself. But the scales were out of order and the indicator stopped at 75 pounds.

"What do you know!" the little boy marveled. "She's hollow!"

BULLDOG BARKER

Sikeston High School, Sikeston, Missouri

Students Hurry Too Often: America Needs Relaxation

WHY IS EVERYONE IN A HURRY? The world is spinning 16,500 miles per hour and man is doing his level best to leave it behind. America, especially, is running itself to a frenzy.

This peculiar characteristic is evident in the high school, as can be noticed at lunchtime, when people run over, around, and into everybody else.

American's lives are puppets of time. An American cannot go anywhere or do anything casually--his life has to be regulated, divided, and segmented in a futile attempt to capture a little bit of eternity.

One stampedes to lunch to be "intime" to avoid waiting. One hurries to the lounge after eating to socialize for a minute or two, and then scurries off to class, to wait impatiently for the hour to end.

Finally the day is over, and everyone leaves school as quickly as possible or else frets in the lounge until transportation arrives. At home one waits, counting hours, for some special event; or maybe just a television show. People seem to burn up all their energy either going somewhere or waiting to get there.

Driving is probably the most graphic example of America's rush. How many lives are lost by someone burning his tires off to reach a stop sign? Why must people go fives miles over the limit instead of under?

The point is -- slow down! Relax! Don't be in such a regulated hurry to do everything. Stop and talk to someone you know instead of just tossing a brief greeting. If a tight schedule must be met, plan it out to allow a little extra time -- and don't spend that time worrying about what you might be doing.

Make a habit of being an easy-going, likeable person, instead of admiring someone else who is. Drive five miles under the speed limit for a while. Soon the world will seem a little more under your control; you CAN exist moving at half speed, and you have plenty of power in reserve.

Second Semester Begins; What Does Future Hold?

AS THE SECOND SEMESTER begins, realization of what the future holds is in all of the students' minds.

To seniors it is the final semester of their high school days. The future is filled with thoughts of college and careers. As graduation day draws nearer, seniors find it difficult to believe that this is finally THEIR graduation.

To juniors it means only one more semester left and then they will be able to claim the title of seniors. They will no longer have the dreaded name of "underclassmen."

Juniors have all the activities to look forward to that are now becoming memories to seniors, such as Red Peppers, football and basketball games, homecoming, student body elections, and many more events at Sikeston nigh.

To sophomores it just means that they have one less semester to worry about and that they have finally become acquainted with the customs and rules of Sikeston high school.

They are not discouraged, for they retain the thought that some day THEY will be the seniors and will get the satisfaction of being upperclassmen.

Seniors, remember, only 126 days until graduation; use them wisely and make plans for the future that is waiting for you.

Farris Ranks 'Outstanding' In Athletics

During the football season, Bruce backed up the senior quarterback Wayne Limbaugh. He scored 18 points in varsity play, and he was the starting quarterback on the "B" team.

He was also one of the very few sophomores to letter his first year in high school.

Bruce plays forward on both the "A" and "B" teams in basketball.

He also has a special interest in baseball. For the past few years he has been pitching in the Babe Ruth team, and he was chosen on the All-Star team last year.

Bruce pitched in the two tournaments participated in by the All-Star team in Sikeston and Poplar Bluff last summer. He was voted the most valuable player in each of the games.

Bruce plans to try out for pitcher on the baseball team at school in the spring. He hopes to try for third base on the Connie Mack team in Sikeston next summer.

Bruce is also a member of the student council, representing homeroom 10-C.

He is vice-president of the sophomore class.

Bruce hopes to attend the University of Missouri after he graduates from Sikeston high school.

New Courses Help Seniors Plan Future

Independent Study, Career Explorations Given This Semester

Independent study is designed to teach students how to manage time and to prepare them for college.

Each student is given two weeks to select a subject of interest to him on which a formal paper will be written.

Carl Wright is the coordinator of the course and will help students if they are confronted with problems concerning the course; -- otherwise, the student's time is his own to prepare his paper.

The paper will not receive a letter grade. It will be graded by a committee and rated as acceptable, non-acceptable, or excellent.

Students enrolled in independent study are Camille Bowman, Steve Spear, Becky Wagner, Toni Zaricor, and Teresa Hamelmann.

Kay Trigg, Patti McMullin, Charles Stamp, Ned Matthews, Skip Alsup, Larry Lancaster, Danny Spears, Roger Francis, Bill Lashmet, and George Bechtold.

Career explorations is being offered for the first time this semester. An enrollment of 37 students proves the definite interest taken by students in careers.

Self appraisal will be the first goal of students in career exploration. Each student will compare ability, aptitude, and interest with the career he plans to choose.

Professional occupations will be considered. Guest speakers are to speak to the class during the year about occupations.

Each student will then select a career of interest to him and will do individual research on this career.

Finally the students will learn how to find and apply for jobs in both small towns and big cities.

Independent study and career exploration are devised for seniors and their futures.

'Printing Week' Reminds World: January 15—21

International Printing Week has been observed during the past week in nations throughout the world. Tomorrow signifies the end of this week commemorating the invention of the printing press.

This past week has been celebrated to honor the graphic arts, printing house craftsmen, and the 259th birthday of Benjamin Franklin, who was instrumental in improving the art of printing.

People seldom stop to consider the "power of print," taking for granted each day the books they study. It is too often forgotten that but for the printing press only the wealthy would be able to obtain the books transcribed by hand in the monasteries.

Democracy, such as that known in the United States, can thrive only on an educated people, and without print the multitudes would not have the abundant opportunity for education.

As a news media, print cannot be overlooked. It is one of the most important factors in communicating the news to the populace.

Readers of today can quickly discover the facts they need to know by glancing at the headlines and decks specified to make the topic plain.

International Printing Week is set up in order to remind the people of the importance of print in extending their reservoiors of knowledge, and by so doing, furthering democracy in the United States. An informed people is a free people.

Bulldog Barker is printed by the journalists of Sikeston high school each week. These students strive to use various size of types to make an attractive layout.

Staffers are always on the alert for "news," and if anyone has a story or some items he would like to see "in print," please be sure to inform the journalists early in each week.

Yearbook Sales Close March 1; Order Growler

Growler sales campaign will close Wednesday, March 1.

Sales will continue until this date, and no yearbooks may be purchased after the deadline.

Students desiring to purchase an annual should contact any member of the journalism class for it is necessary to send the exact number of Growlers needed to the yearbook publisher on that date.

No additional copies may be ordered after that time from the company.

Payments of $5 per book may be given to Mike Buchanan, Connie Nowell, Linda Bennett, Barb Blacker, Darla Scoles, Cheryl Hurley, Mary Reid, Steve Spear.

Camille Bowman, Judy Murchison, Stan McMackins, Greg Bailey, or Bill Marsh.

These staff members will receive payments before school, at noon, and after school each day.

Growler pages (approximately 50) were sent to the publisher in December, and another shipment will be made in February.

Final shipment of the yearbook must be made to the publisher by June 10. This will enable the annual to be a complete review of the year's activities.

Growlers will be distributed to the students about the middle of August -- this enables the seniors to receive the books before they leave for college in September.

Cheerleaders Name Three As 'Outstanding Peppers'

Joyce Vaught, Lynne Tenkhoff, and Mary Anne Sappenfield were chosen "outstanding Red Peppers" Friday night as Sikeston played Charleston at Anniston.

Cheerleaders named these three girls as "outstanding Red Peppers" because of their enthusiastic cheering throughout the entire game.

Sikeston won the "B" game, but lost the "A" game by three points.

Attendance by the Red Peppers at the game was described as good, and the girls are to be complimented on their desire to display school spirit.

Bulldogs will face the Malden Green Waves at the Sikeston Armory tonight. Red Peppers are urged to be in their seats by 7 p.m.

"B" game begins at 7, and the "A" team faces the opponents at approximately 8:30.

One girl from each of the three classes is usually selected for the "outstanding" honor at each basketball game.

Homemaking Class Offers Various Units Of Study

Mrs. Hemba Young and Mrs. Larry April instruct students in various courses of the homemaking department in Sikeston high school.

Topics offered each semester in high school are tailoring, child development, home nursing, home management, home decorating, family living, grooming, intermediate foods and clothing, and advanced foods and clothing.

Each of these units is designed with the purpose to further the knowledge of the students who will be applying these practices in further life.

Students in the tailoring class learn to design and construct wool garments.

Child development is a lecture course with some observation at nursery and kindergarten schools in Sikeston.

Home nursing students study a Red Cross textbook and have a session of 12 laboratory meetings, supervised by the practical nursing students enrolled in the Manpower-Development program of the Sikeston schools.

Semester unit in home management is a course where students study the management of money, time, energy, and personal ability.

Home decoration teaches the members how to coordinate color for all surfaces--furniture and interior of home.

Advanced foods instructs students to be creative in the use of easy-to-serve and packaged foods; know the food habits and customs of individuals of various cultural, racial, and religious backgrounds; and study health and safety practices with food in the home.

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

As you have many members in one physical body and those members differ in their functions, so we, though many in number, compose one body in Christ and all all members of one another. (Romans 12: 4-5, Phillips)

PRAYER: O God, from whom alone the fullness of life proceeds, grant that Thy church may not glory in wealth or numbers. May it glory rather because Christ is in its midst to offer through its ministries compassion and the peace that passes understanding; to Thine honor and glory. . . . . Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Chicago cab driver and, believe me, hacking in Chicago is a tough way to make a buck. But the worst part of the job isn't the driving, it's the people who get into the cab and right away they want to tell you their troubles.

Yesterday I had a lady who was going to the airport. She started to tell me a long story about her husband running around with a girl who works in his office. She got so worked up that she hit me on the back with her purse and hollered, "How do you like that for an old goat with grandchildren?"

Finally I said, "Look, Mrs., why don't you write to Ann Landers and let me drive this cab?"

She yelled, "I DID write to Ann Landers and she told me I need to talk to somebody about my problem so I am talking to you."

Now I know you don't mean for people to tell their troubles to cab drivers. What you mean is they should talk to ministers or marriage counselors and like that. So please, Ann Landers, make it clear to the folks who write you. Much obliged - BIG RED

Dear Red: People who tell their troubles to cab drivers don't want advice. They just want somebody to listen.

A cab driver can be the ideal person to unload on because he's a stranger, he couldn't care less about who is to blame, and the passenger will probably never see him again. So, be a good egg and listen.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I will be celebrating our 20th wedding anniversary next month. The problem is that he wants to buy me a mink coat for my anniversary and I don't want one. I am going through the change and what I need most of the time is a fan, not a fur coat.

My husband says I am being selfish. He claims that I am depriving him of one of the greatest pleasures a man can have - presenting his wife with something. If you say he is right, I will consider it. May I hear from you please? -- SHAKER HEIGHTS

Dear Shaker Heights: I urge you to reconsider. Forget about yourself. Make the sacrifice. Put your husband's wishes first. Think Mink. You'll be glad you let him talk you into it.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think about a grown man who has a faithful wife (not beautiful, just average looking) and two adorable children, yet the only picture he carries in his billfold is one of his mother and father?

Some men have pictures of the wife and children on their desks, but we don't even rate a billfold. This may sound like a petty complaint but it hurt me deeply when I opened my husband's shirt drawer yesterday and discovered the new pictures I had made up for the wallet. This morning I checked and found that he is still carrying the old picutre of his parents.

Dear Left Out: I'll bet your husband has been carrying that old picture of his parents for many years - and I hope you'll remain silent and let him do it as long as he wants to. The fact that he doesn't carry your picture doesn't mean he cares less for you and the children. It simply means he feels guilty about making the change and he just can't bring himself to do it.

Almanac For 1967 Now Ready

"American farmers in today's world agriculture" is the timely farming theme highlighted in the 1967 Ford Almanac, just off the press.

In addition to its special appeal to agricultural interests, however, this new Ford year book offers dozens of new ideas and helpful tips to city and suburban readers, as well as rural residents.

The 1967 Ford Almanac is the 14th consecutive edition produced by the noted farm writer, John Strohm, and his staff. It covers everything from hints for part-time gardeners to farm management ideas for efficient commercial farmers.

Here are some highlights from the 1967 Alamanac:

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

THE CASE OF THE DISAPPOINTING VETERAN

Bill was a genius in his field. While he may not have been as smart as the guy who invented money, he certainly was on par with the guy who thought up interest. Consequently, after he signed a two-year contract to work for Mr. Smith, Mr. Smith's disappointment was readily understandable when Bill enlisted in the Army. Three years later, however, he was all smiles when Bill received his discharge. Anticipating that Bill would return and fulfill his two-year contract, Mr. Smith prepared a hearty welcome for him only to find out that Bill had other plans.

"Since my contract with you expired while I was in service," Bill explained, "I've decided to take a better job. If I don't seize opportunity when it comes, I'll have to chase it later."

"That's ridiculous," protested Mr. Smith. "You can't turn your back on me. We have an unfulfilled two-year contract. Your going into the Army didn't void it. I'm still entitled to your services for the two years you were unavailable."

Bill disagreed and the dispute had to be resolved in court.

If you were the judge, would you require veteran Bill to fulfill his unfulfilled contract?

THIS IS HOW THE JUDGE RULED: No. He held that being in military service is a valid excuse for not performing a contractual obligation; that since Bill's contract had expired, and it contained no provision extending it beyond the expiration date, he was no longer required to work for Mr. Smith.

After taking over a new territory, one of our salesmen came upon a prospective customer who proved to be a real challenge. Entering the lobby for the first time he found no receptionist, only a telephone which connected him directly to the purchasing agent upstairs. No matter what pitch our salesman used he could not get anyone to come downstairs to see him.

Finally, one afternoon he came back to our office all smiles, and explained he had finally managed to meet the purchasing agent.

Asked how he accomplished this, he answered, "I just telephoned upstairs, and said, 'Your lobby is on fire!"

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

As you have many members in one physical body and those members differ in their functions, so we, though many in number, compose one body in Christ and all all members of one another. (Romans 12: 4-5, Phillips)

PRAYER: O God, from whom alone the fullness of life proceeds, grant that Thy church may not glory in wealth or numbers. May it glory rather because Christ is in its midst to offer through its ministries compassion and the peace that passes understanding; to Thine honor and glory. . . . .Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Chicago cab driver and, believe me, hacking in Chicago is a tough way to make a buck. But the worst part of the job isn't the driving, it's the people who get into the cab and right away they want to tell you their troubles.

Yesterday I had a lady who was going to the airport. She started to tell me a long story about her husband running around with a girl who works in his office. She got so worked up that she hit me on the back with her purse and hollered, "How do you like that for an old goat with grandchildren?"

Finally I said, "Look, Mrs., why don't you write to Ann Landers and let me drive this cab?"

She yelled, "I DID write to Ann Landers and she told me I need to talk to somebody about my problem so I am talking to you."

Now I know you don't mean for people to tell their troubles to cab drivers. What you mean is they should talk to ministers or marriage counselors and like that. So please, Ann Landers, make it clear to the folks who write you. Much obliged - BIG RED

Dear Red: People who tell their troubles to cab drivers don't want advice. They just want somebody to listen.

A cab driver can be the ideal person to unload on because he's a stranger, he couldn't care less about who is to blame, and the passenger will probably never see him again. So, be a good egg and listen.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I will be celebrating our 20th wedding anniversary next month. The problem is that he wants to buy me a mink coat for my anniversary and I don't want one. I am going through the change and what I need most of the time is a fan, not a fur coat.

My husband says I am being selfish. He claims that I am depriving him of one of the greatest pleasures a man can have - presenting his wife with something . If you say he is right, I will consider it. May I hear from you please? -- SHAKER HEIGHTS

Dear Shaker Heights: I urge you to reconsider. Forget about yourself. Make the sacrifice. Put your husband's wishes first. Think Mink. You'll be glad you let him talk you into it.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think about a grown man who has a faithful wife (not beautiful, just average looking) and two adorable children, yet the only picture he carries in his billfold is one of his mother and father?

Some men have pictures of the wife and children on their desks, but we don't even rate a billfold. This may sound like a petty complaint but it hurt me deeply when I opened my husband's shirt drawer yesterday and discovered the new pictures I had made up for the wallet. This morning I checked and found that he is still carrying the old picutre of his parents.

Dear Left Out: I'll bet your husband has been carrying that old picture of his parents for many years - and I hope you'll remain silent and let him do it as long as he wants to. The fact that he doesn't carry your picture doesn't mean he cares less for you and the children. It simply means he feels guilty about making the change and he just can't bring himself to do it.

Dirksen, Ford Give GOP Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Appraising the state of a "vexed and troubled" union, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has prescribed reinforced U.S. determination and "a more vigorous effort on land, sea and in the air" to end the war in Vietnam.

And House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford has vowed Republican opposition to a wartime tax increase until President Johnson makes "a convincing case" for the boost he seeks.

The two minority leaders delivered their joint appraisal Thursday night before some 250 Republican colleagues in the Capitol's hot, crowded old Supreme Court chamber.

Ford said November's election victories gave the GOP a mandate to chart "a new direction for America. "As we look ahead, Republicans see a program of sensible solutions for the seventies," he said.

"Why don't we come up with some positive solutions for the sixties?" Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield asked later.

Another Democrat was more caustic in his assessment of the appraisal.

"I gather that Messrs. Dirksen and Ford are strongly in support of the Vietnam war, but strongly opposed to paying for it," said Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn. "This would have those who are fighting and dying make the only sacrifice."

But there were only Republicans to cheer, no Democrats to chide, when Dirksen and Ford delivered the twin speeches they said were neither replies nor rebuttals to the State of the Union message Johnson took to Congress 10 days ago.

Dirksen and some of his Republican colleagues were on the White House guest list for a buffet and reception a few hours before the speech.

The Republicans show was produced with a minute-by-minute timetable, designed for live, network television. There was none, although the speeches were filmed and recorded for later showing. Two radio networks — NBC and Mutual — broadcast the speeches.

Ford spliced into his speech a call for legislation "requiring television and radio to provide free and equal treatment to major parties and their spokesmen" between, as well as during, political campaigns.

Dirksen said Johnson spent 70 minutes on the air. "Tonight, we have but 27 minutes. That's not quite equal time," he said.

nothing in the New Madrid county conference race as Matthews has got it sewn up and if it hasn't already they will after tonight as the Parma Pirates, who are 2-1 in the conference, play there tonight...Gideon is in a rebounding year as is Portageville...We think the Gideon quintet has the poise and experience to win this conference contest. Gideon 46, Portageville 43.

Morehouse at Risco - After suffering such a defeat Tuesday at Howardville the Tigers will have the advantage although they are not playing on their home court...they are playing Risco... Morehouse 166, Risco 100. How does that suit you, their Miss C---Ber.

Dexter at Caruthersville - The Bearcats...who almost knocked off the high flying Bloomfield Wildcats earlier this week will have a field night at Caruthersville. Dexter 98, Caruthersville 67.

Charleston at Cape Central - Cape and Charleston both have been playing good ball lately - but we think the Blue Jays have been playing better and will have little trouble with the Tigers. Charleston 68, Cape 63.

Howardville at Lilbourn - What a rival contest this game is going to be...Both schools being about a half mile apart and wanting to be the other every chance they get...set the stage for this New Madrid county conference game...Lilbourn has the home court advantage but the Hawks have the height and shooting advantage...We just don't know which way to turn... so we...see Howardville...after a long through thought. For 1966, the actual expenditures in each of these categories were as follows: salaries fees and office expenses $16,033.97; circuit court administration $5,368.68; election costs $11,725.38; public welfare and health services $26,928.70; and contingent expenses and obligations $44,616.87.

Most budget items are purposely set somewhat higher than the actual anticipated expenditures, Goodin said, since the budget, once approved, becomes the statutory limit on expenditures.

For 1967, the "other expenses" category includes the following items: extension council $12,201; social security; county part, $4,500; insurance and bonds $3,000; publication costs $2,700; inquest cost bills $500; local registrars $300; operation and care of county buildings and grounds, $21,100; civil defense $5,082; Oak Grove cemetery $3,500; and emergency fund $10,000.

The buildings and grounds budget item includes $10,800 for repairs to buildings, which compares with 1966 actual expenditures of only $863.91. Much of that sum would probably be applied to courthouse remodeling and repairs later in the year.

sentenced him to a six-months term in the county jail.

On a similar charge to which he pleaded guilty, Glenn Richardson was also fined $120. The judge revoked his drivers license for a year, and placed him on probation for a year.

Another $120 fine was assessed against Alvin Chesly Haynes who also plead guilty to a state charge of driving while intoxicated. His driver license was revoked for a year and he was given six months in jail and placed on probation.

Fined $35 was David Ash, who was charged with petit larceny. He was sentenced to a 90-day jail term with the understanding that probation will be granted upon payment of the fine.

Albert Lee Thornton was charged with careless and imprudent driving by excessive speed and with being an unlicensed operator and he was fined $40 by the judge.

Charged with careless and imprudent driving and with no operator license, Leroy Junior Harris was fined $15.00 on each count.

Paying fines of $15 each for careless and imprudent driving were John F. Lawrence and Dennie Juneau Little, and paying $15 on speeding charges were Orsville Mackie Springer and Donald Dewitt.

Fines of $11 each were assessed against Earl Henry Eaves and Ezzard C. Long for improper registration, and Paul A. Barfoot for having expired license.

ject. All the boys said the striking feature about it was that it made no sound and just before it disappeared it turned a bright white. The youths said it hurt their eyes to look at it when it turned white. It then disappeared in a southwesterly direction, the youths said.

The youths said it hovered for at least two minutes in one spot, then took off at a high rate of speed.

It wasn't an airplane, because it was low enough to be heard if it had been a plane. It made no sound, and it changed colors, the youths said.

Gary Byrd said it was football shaped with red lights on each end and another red light in the middle.

Police said they received three calls reporting unidentified objects Thursday between 6:02 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Two of the calls came from the Russell and Byrd boys.

The other call was from Mrs. Gerda Harrison, 614 Daniel. She said she first saw a "greenish colored object to the east" at about 6:30 p.m. as she was driving home.

She said she watched the object from the window of her residence for more than a half hour. Mrs. Harrison said she called a friend, Mrs. Ruth Turner, 424 South Kingshighway, who also reported seeing the light.

Several reports of unidentified flying objects have been made in the past three days in Cape Girardeau, Charleston, Bragg City and Cairo.

The Missouri highway patrol at Poplar Bluff says it has received numerous reports of unidentified flying objects during the last three or four days.

A radio dispatcher for the patrol said, "they've been seeing things for the last three or four night. I don't know what they've been seeing, but I think its the planet Venus."

Two policemen at Cairo, across the Mississippi River, rushed to a levee after hearing radio reports of the objects.

Patrolman Gene Smith said, "If Carl Jones hadn't been with me I wouldn't have said a word about it."

Smith and Jones reported the object they saw featured red and white, pulsating lights which turned green at five-second intervals.

lied commanders reported a series of clashes from the southern tip of the country through the northern provinces.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported a government force of regimental size--about 1,500 men —launched a search-and-destroy sweep in southernmost An Xuyen Province and in the first day killed 16 Viet Cong. This was one of five scattered operations in which the Vietnamese command said a total of 43 Viet Cong were killed. Casualties to government troops were reported light in all five.

Vietnamese headquarters also reported that government troops repulsed a mortar and ground attack against a military post 60 miles southwest of Saigon in the Mekong Delta. A spokesman said 15 Viet Cong were killed and government casualties were light.

In the northern province of Thua Thien, the U.S. Marine base camp and airstrip at Phu Bai, 10 miles southeast of Hue, was hit by 30 to 35 mortar rounds today, but U.S. headquarters said U.S. casualties and damage to equipment were light.

The two planes that went down Thursday raised the total reported lost in the air war against the north to 462. North Vietnam claimed three planes were shot down Thursday.

One of the planes lost was a carrier-based Navy A6 Intruder and the other was an Air Force F4C Phantom jet. Each carried two men who were listed as missing. U. S. headquarters said the cause of the crashes was not known.

Air Force jet bombers pounded three railroad yards 50 to 60 miles northeast of Hanoi, and pilots reports damage to rail lines and boxcars.

Other Air Force pilots reported cutting the northeast rail line in five places 60 to 118 miles northwest of Hanoi. The two lines are the main rail arteries between Hanoi and China.

Only minor sniper fire was reported in Operation Cedar Falls, the big American sweep of the iron triangle 20 to 30 miles north of Saigon. U.S. forces have reported killing 548 Communist soldiers since the operation started Jan. 8.

Mild Weather To Continue

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Some unseasonably warm weather is ahead for Missouri.

The weatherman says highs Saturday will hit the 55-60 range in northwest Missouri and the 58-65 bracket in the rest of the state.

Dirksen, Ford Give GOP Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Appraising the state of a "vexed and troubled" union, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has prescribed reinforced U.S. determination and "a more vigorous effort on land, sea and in the air" to end the war in Vietnam.

And House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford has vowed Republican opposition to a wartime tax increase until President Johnson makes "a convincing case" for the boost he seeks.

The two minority leaders delivered their joint appraisal Thursday night before some 250 Republican colleagues in the Capitol's hot, crowded old Supreme Court chamber.

Ford said November's election victories gave the GOP a mandate to chart "a new direction for America. "As we look ahead, Republicans see a program of sensible solutions for the seventies," he said.

"Why don't we come up with some positive solutions for the sixties?" Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield asked later.

Another Democrat was more caustic in his assessment of the appraisal.

"I gather that Messrs. Dirksen and Ford are strongly in support of the Vietnam war, but strongly opposed to paying for it," said Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn. "This would have those who are fighting and dying make the only sacrifice."

But there were only Republicans to cheer, no Democrats to chide, when Dirksen and Ford delivered the twin speeches they said were neither replies nor rebuttals to the State of the Union message Johnson took to Congress 10 days ago.

Dirksen and some of his Republican colleagues were on the White House guest list for a buffet and reception a few hours before the speech.

The Republicans show was produced with a minute-by-minute timetable, designed for live, network television. There was none, although the speeches were filmed and recorded for later showing. Two radio networks — NBC and Mutual — broadcast the speeches.

Ford spliced into his speech a call for legislation "requiring television and radio to provide free and equal treatment to major parties and their spokesmen" between, as well as during, political campaigns.

Dirksen said Johnson spent 70 minutes on the air. "Tonight, we have but 27 minutes. That's not quite equal time," he said.

nothing in the New Madrid county conference race as Matthews has got it sewn up and if it hasn't already they will after tonight as the Parma Pirates, who are 2-1 in the conference, play there tonight...Gideon is in a rebounding year as is Portageville...We think the Gideon quintet has the poise and experience to win this conference contest. Gideon 46, Portageville 43.

Morehouse at Risco - After suffering such a defeat Tuesday at Howardville the Tigers will have the advantage although they are not playing on their home court...they are playing Risco... Morehouse 166, Risco 100. How does that suit you, their Miss C---Ber.

Dexter at Caruthersville - The Bearcats...who almost knocked off the high flying Bloomfield Wildcats earlier this week will have a field night at Caruthersville. Dexter 98, Caruthersville 67.

Charleston at Cape Central - Cape and Charleston both have been playing good ball lately - but we think the Blue Jays have been playing better and will have little trouble with the Tigers. Charleston 68, Cape 63.

Howardville at Lilbourn - What a rival contest this game is going to be...Both schools being about a half mile apart and wanting to be the other every chance they get...set the stage for this New Madrid conference game...Lilbourn has the home court advantage but the Hawks have the height and shooting advantage...We just don't know which way to turn... so we...see Howardville...after a long through thought. Howardville 35, Lilbourn 23.

That's it.....

For 1966, the actual expenditures in each of these categories were as follows: salaries fees and office expenses $16,033.97; circuit court administration $5,368.68; election costs $11,725.38; public welfare and health services $26,928.70; and contingent expenses and obligations $44,616.87.

Most budget items are purposely set somewhat higher than the actual anticipated expenditures, Goodin said, since the budget, once approved, becomes the statutory limit on expenditures.

For 1967, the "other expenses" category includes the following items: extension council $12,201; social security; county part, $4,500; insurance and bonds $3,000; publication costs $2,700; inquest cost bills $500; local registrars $300; operation and care of county buildings and grounds, $21,100; civil defense $5,082; Oak Grove cemetery $3,500; and emergency fund $10,000.

The buildings and grounds budget item includes $10,800 for repairs to buildings, which compares with 1966 actual expenditures of only $863.91. Much of that sum would probably be applied to courthouse remodeling and repairs later in the year.

sentenced him to a six-months term in the county jail.

On a similar charge to which he pleaded guilty, Glenn Richardson was also fined $120. The judge revoked his drivers license for a year, and placed him on probation for a year.

Another $120 fine was assessed against Alvin Chesly Haynes who also plead guilty to a state charge of driving while intoxicated. His driver license was revoked for a year and he was given six months in jail and placed on probation.

Fined $35 was David Ash, who was charged with petit larceny. He was sentenced to a 90-day jail term with the understanding that probation will be granted upon payment of the fine.

Albert Lee Thornton was charged with careless and imprudent driving by excessive speed and with being an unlicensed operator and he was fined $40 by the judge.

Charged with careless and imprudent driving and with no operator license, Leroy Junior Harris was fined $15.00 on each count.

Paying fines of $15 each for careless and imprudent driving were John F. Lawrence and Dennie Juneau Little, and paying $15 on speeding charges were Orsville Mackie Springer and Donald Dewitt.

Fines of $11 each were assessed against Earl Henry Eaves and Ezzard C. Long for improper registration, and Paul A. Barfoot for having expired license.

ject. All the boys said the striking feature about it was that it made no sound and just before it disappeared it turned a bright white. The youths said it hurt their eyes to look at it when it turned white. It then disappeared in a southwesterly direction, the youths said.

The youths said it hovered for at least two minutes in one spot, then took off at a high rate of speed.

It wasn't an airplane, because it was low enough to be heard if it had been a plane. It made no sound, and it changed colors, the youths said.

Gary Byrd said it was football shaped with red lights on each end and another red light in the middle.

Police said they received three calls reporting unidentified objects Thursday between 6:02 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Two of the calls came from the Russell and Byrd boys.

The other call was from Mrs. Gerda Harrison, 614 Daniel. She said she first saw a "greenish colored object to the east" at about 6:30 p.m. as she was driving home.

She said she watched the object from the window of her residence for more than a half hour. Mrs. Harrison said she called a friend, Mrs. Ruth Turner, 424 South Kingshighway, who also reported seeing the light.

Several reports of unidentified flying objects have been made in the past three days in Cape Girardeau, Charleston, Bragg City and Cairo.

The Missouri highway patrol at Poplar Bluff says it has received numerous reports of unidentified flying objects during the last three or four days.

A radio dispatcher for the patrol said, "they've been seeing things for the last three or four night. I don't know what they've been seeing, but I think its the planet Venus."

Two policemen at Cairo, across the Mississippi River, rushed to a levee after hearing radio reports of the objects.

Patrolman Gene Smith said, "If Carl Jones hadn't been with me I wouldn't have said a word about it."

Smith and Jones reported the object they saw featured red and white, pulsating lights which turned green at five-second intervals.

lied commanders reported a series of clashes from the southern tip of the country through the northern provinces.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported a government force of regimental size--about 1,500 men —launched a search-and-destroy sweep in southernmost An Xuyen Province and in the first day killed 16 Viet Cong. This was one of five scattered operations in which the Vietnamese command said a total of 43 Viet Cong were killed. Casualties to government troops were reported light in all five.

Vietnamese headquarters also reported that government troops repulsed a mortar and ground attack against a military post 60 miles southwest of Saigon in the Mekong Delta. A spokesman said 15 Viet Cong were killed and government casualties were light.

In the northern province of Thua Thien, the U.S. Marine base camp and airstrip at Phu Bai, 10 miles southeast of Hue, was hit by 30 to 35 mortar rounds today, but U.S. headquarters said U.S. casualties and damage to equipment were light.

The two planes that went down Thursday raised the total reported lost in the air war against the north to 462. North Vietnam claimed three planes were shot down Thursday.

One of the planes lost was a carrier-based Navy A6 Intruder and the other was an Air Force F4C Phantom jet. Each carried two men who were listed as missing. U. S. headquarters said the cause of the crashes was not known.

Air Force jet bombers pounded three railroad yards 50 to 60 miles northeast of Hanoi, and pilots reports damage to rail lines and boxcars.

Other Air Force pilots reported cutting the northeast rail line in five places 60 to 118 miles northwest of Hanoi. The two lines are the main rail arteries between Hanoi and China.

Only minor sniper fire was reported in Operation Cedar Falls, the big American sweep of the iron triangle 20 to 30 miles north of Saigon. U.S. forces have reported killing 548 Communist soldiers since the operation started Jan. 8.
